BE-AT

An Anthology of Poems by The National and International Beat Poets Laureate

Edited by James P. Wagner (Ishwa)
This book is dedicated to a group of individuals who have inspired others to express themselves. They are the new generation of “Beats”. Typically it is those who have something to say and want their voices to be heard.
Foreword

The Beat Generation is a literary movement started by a group of writers whose work explored and influenced American culture and politics in the post-World War II era. The bulk of their work was published and popularized throughout the 1950s. In a rare interview in French (with English subtitles) for a Canadian television channel, Kerouac explained how he came up with the name that described the literary movement of his generation, the Beat Generation. Jack Kerouac was asked what he thought being ‘beat’ meant. For the interviewer he redefined the word ‘beat’ as ‘BE-AT’(Latin), but insisted that was not important. When hearing some old men talk about being crushed by society, beaten down, poor, defeated, Kerouac expressed sympathy for their plight. He decided that his generation, ‘The Beat Generation’ would not succumb to what society dictated. He would exercise his ‘voice’ to prevent it, and inspire others to do likewise.

The original beats were heavily influenced by Zen Buddhist Philosophy. In consideration of the philosophy, the phrase ‘BE-AT’ (Latin) implied consciousness of who you were, what you were doing and where you were going at the present moment of time – in a word, full-awareness of space/time consciousness and one’s place in it. In this context, the objective of beat poetry is use to that tool to improve all corporeal, interpersonal, and spiritual aspects of the human condition.

These poets symbolizing be-at consciousness would become known as the Beat Generation, a group of writers interested in changing consciousness and defying conventional writing. Their work was based upon the premise that they would be true to themselves and express their ‘voice’ about matters that concerned them. No one would tell them how to write, what to write about, or infringe upon their expression in any way. Beat poetry is free verse in every sense of the word. Every word, phrase, and line represented their right to express themselves in the manner they saw fit without regard to any preconceived notion of style or format. The style was one’s own, the format one’s right to choose, and the subject matter one’s license to use. No one had the right to choose it for you.

Our new generation of ‘Beats’ is following that dream. That is to be free of the encumbrance of ‘conventions’ and ‘expectations’. Those are the societal conventions that dictate what to do, what to say, how to think, and how to act. Primarily conventions and expectations are thought-control and behavior modifications designed to remind a person he or she is not free. He or she is confined by the boundaries of imposed mind-control; consigned to live in their box, never test the boundaries of it, and be satisfied with their lot in life. Such individuals live in a box. Our new generation of beats has decided they don’t want to live in their box. In essence, they want to expand outside of it because when one stretches one’s arms one doesn’t want to feel the sides. It is confirmation one is not free. To be confined by a box means one is imprisoned by it. For a beat, it becomes a moral imperative to break free and nurture the free spirit inside you. A beat takes that opportunity to express their ‘voice’ and makes the most of it.

It defeats the purpose of living if one is not free to be him or herself. It begs the question: Who else are they supposed to be? Are we supposed to be carbon-copies of each other or am I supposed to be me? The wondrous diversity of Nature I see around me informs me I am supposed to be me. The logical choice then is to embrace my individuality and be me.
Table of Contents

National Beat Poets Laureate ................................................................. 1
George Wallace: 2015-2016 ................................................................. 2
Lori Desrosiers: 2016-2017 ................................................................. 12 William F. DeVault: 2017-2018 ......................................................... 20

International Beat Poet Laureate ......................................................... 31
Chryssa Velissariou 2017-2018 (Greece) ........................................... 32

State Beat Poets Laureate 2017-2019 .................................................. 41
Chris Vannoy - State of CA, San Diego ............................................. 42
Annie Sauter - State of CO ............................................................... 52
Ernel O. Grant - State of CT ............................................................. 72
Paul Richmond - State of MA ........................................................... 83
Carlo Parcelli - State of MD ............................................................. 95 Marci Payne - State of NJ ................................................................. 114
James P. Wagner (Ishwa) - State of NY, Long Island ................. 123
Viviana Grell - State of NY, New York City ............................... 134
Ngoma Hill - State of NY, New York State ............................... 146
Daniel McTaggart - State of WV ...................................................... 157

NBPF Staff ..................................................................................... 163
Colin Haskins .................................................................................. 164
Debbie Tosun Kilday ....................................................................... 166
Yvon J. Cormier .............................................................................. 167
National Beat Poets Laureate
George Wallace: 2015-2016

The Truth Of The Matter

it is the fourth of july and the children of america are barefoot in the sand and run like shadows into and out of the sun, they wave their big flag and they cast no shadows, because they are creatures of the sun, shadows have not touched them yet and the flag which follows behind them waves and waves like the sun, the sun shines everywhere for the children of america and they grow like indian corn, naturally.

and they lie in the sun and stare into eternity, unlike the boy reading the newspaper who is paying close attention to the news of the world, and they do not know the truth of the matter, they ignore the world, which is better than paying so much attention to it the way adults do, and it's better that way, what the adults know is often very stupid and anyhow there are no shadows that grow on children yet -- no shadows of love, no shadows of longing, no shadows of law or debt or disillusion, no government no death no loss no gain no limitation.

and it is the fourth of july, it is the birthday of america and the fireworks will come, the fireworks will come, sooner rather than later i mean, when the sun goes down it will be dusk and the children of america will look up at the big display and they will wonder, they will look up and laugh and clap their hands, and one or two of them will know the truth of the matter, and be sad, and nothing can stop any of this from happening.
Coyote, This Time

The road leads north across the desert until there is no more road only the border wall and that is patrolled by another man in a jeep who throws no shadow. It is the age of helicopter steel. It is the age of the drone and the vigilante, it is the age of fear between men and men, and some men are hollow, hollow as a metal jacket. We do not need more men like that. We need more men like this man waiting for a change in the weather in the desert heat. This man, his hands are shaking with cold, his heart soaking up the world like bread and water. He is a man only a man, but he is making plans to defeat a wall another man has built. And he will defeat it. Kiss the ring and call it holy, where there is work there are men, because there are mouths to fill and the means to fill them. Seal a man in a cactus shell, toss him over the Rio Grande. He will open it up and he will climb back out again.

No one can separate a man from his work, not even a president. A man is stubborn, a man like this man anyway. His breath escapes his body like cold fog, his old life was a prison his new life is a dream, dreams don’t die and you can’t keep a good man out. He’s a leather glove and if you toss him out of a car window and leave him to die his fingerprints will just crawl out and he will keep on coming. He will bounce back, he will cross your fucking border and stand on the corner until someone comes along to give him work and he will nail your roofbeams and spackle your walls, he will put the hinges on your empty coffins.

Cross your heart and hope to die. He is unapologetic, a double fisted immigrant, just like your grandpappy was. His name is Coyote, this time. His name is America.
How The Mist Moves to make love to you the way the mist moves, without motive or logic, like a bird of prey, like sufi dancing, like the first man to look beyond the golden valley and feel the urge to go, just go, to stray across the river and go into the glow

i am accustomed to the wind and weather and the city, how heavily raindrops fall on concrete, all isotopes and jazz, all mad water, and i am accustomed to the eastern sea, its pavilions and concourses, its secret contours and confessions, its corridors of being,

but i have never known the earth like this, in the hands of sun, my hands, how urgently they rifle through morning -- how the mist moves, in search of itself, through your hair, through your clothing, through my impoverishment and these gestures you offer to the sun and to me, their rhythm, their movement, i have never known gestures quite like these, radioactive, liquid as volcanic rock, quick as obsidian, this sad timepiece ticking in its secret coil and mortal shell and om to your eyes, and om to your lips, blue nests on mountaintops, and om to this eternal confusion, this thing called infatuation and i am a man only a man, and you are a category of womanhood i have never known, you reside beyond scandal or desire, unknown even to yourself, and between us daylight grows pregnant and alive, bold as canna lilies and ready to open!

If Rocks Were Huckleberries And Every Oak Leaf A Message From God

if i had a handful of coffeebeans, and a grinding machine; and squirrels in the yard, and a rifle; and onions and carrots and a sharp knife to cut them up with, and a few potatoes and a little salt, and a clear stream running;

if i had an iron pot and dry matches in a box and tinder in a pan; and shingles and nails and a few sheets of window glass to keep out the rain; and a path to my door and a friend in town with a wagon to visit me once in awhile and relieve the silence, and bring me tea leaves and sugar, and tell me the news;

if i had a tree with hickory nuts and the wind to blow them out of the swaying branches; if rocks were huckleberries and every oak leaf a message from god;

if there was a way to hit apples out of apple trees, safely, i mean, with my fist or with a long stick, so that i could catch them in my hands unbruised, and drop them into a wicker basket well woven by me, and a horse and a hog to share those apples with;
if i had a deep front porch and a straight back chair, and a watchful dog to sit with me and interpret the meaning of storm clouds brewing; and a wife who loved me back, and woke with me up like birds wake me in the morning; and a grandchild learning the alphabet on the floor; you might never hear from me again.
If You Could Remove The Dead From The Dead

if you could remove the dead from the dead, bomb by bomb, eye by eye, if you could pluck the mad bull screaming, from blood and from dust, from the arena, death unstrung, life returned, the fields of faces, their embraces, like clover, like honey, tooth by tooth like bees in grass, while the generals were not watching i mean, while the dictators were not watching, while the idiotic cheers and jeering of the crowd, while the circular race of steel and money and blood and macho, while the worship of the sword, nobody watching, oh it is crazy to think it, oh it is stupid to imagine it, all the sleeping dead rising from death, standing at the bridge, looking down from the parapet, all the incoherent laughter, perfect innocents raised back up from the heap, all the untroubled song, no more disillusionment, no more oblivion, do you understand what i'm trying to say, can you see it for yourself, the slaughtered sons and daughters, sharecroppers and soldiers, students, nurses, peasants and miners, all the sweet lives returned to the living, and all of us embracing them as they rise, i would have you embrace them, i would have you salute and sing them, and welcome them, the dead from the dead, eye by eye, released from their paralysis, liberated from the uselessness and consignment of their caustic dead sleeping, risen from the junta of dollar and nation and power and design, speaking truth to the ruling class, talking the true talk to those who carelessly plant them into soil, no not again, no more this root and rock of going! the dead from the dead, taking back their plows and their farmhats, shaking the reins their fathers and grandfathers put in their hands and returning to their work, hands full of seed and dreams and callouses and sweat, can you hear them singing, the song of the living, can you see the morning sun in their beautiful faces, their penetrating smiles, can you feel all that, their small love, their bravery, men and women, risen, children of god again, risen, their mothers' voices softly ringing in their ears, and am i so stupid as to suggest it, am i so stupid as to imagine it, all their faces in the mist of civilizations and idiotic rain, the dead separated from the dead, bullet by bullet, eye by eye, walking again, hand in hand, like the walking sun Redemption

At midnight I notice the stretch between time zones.
Hawaii eats last night’s supper while Ireland is waking to tomorrow.

We live unaware of the curvature of Earth undaunted by atmospheric shift unfazed by sunspots, tidal currents meteors pass, satellites hum we sleep unconcerned.

We are a blip someone once said in the arc of history and what we call history is only the human story.

We look for evidence of ourselves in our world’s soil but before that were millions of years without us after us is forever time beyond even the concept of time.
Yet there are good things legends we have invented, stories told, art wrought songs sung for centuries evidence of our best selves.

Despite our future slumber in time’s uncaring cradle this is our hope for redemption.
The King of Television

All hail the king of television Gaimon’s book come true the gods of materialism have won.

He walks onto the stage framed by a giant screen cameras strobe in applause.

Phones held high light the Mall the hired audience sings an ode to whiteness, money, success.

Someone punches in the code fake fireworks light the Memorial Pretend to remember Lincoln pretend to remember King pretend to admire Obama pretend to care about history.

He doesn’t care to care he thanks you all for coming but you are not there.
You are at the protests lighting candles waiting, watching for his inevitable fall as five letter signs tumble to the pavement

We are real, there are more of us and we know how to switch the televisions off.

Published in Nicholas Kristoff’s blog, The New York Times, January 25, 2017 Praise to the Earth

Praise to the ocean, waves and foam, bright reef fish hiding in anemone, sharks and whales doze below, above them cormorants and gannets float. To waves that roll into shore at night, the moon reflecting sea foam's white, the breakers in sync with our breathing as the buoy bell sings in the harbor.

Praise to tiny creatures, amoebae and molds, bacteria, to the algae sisters Chloro, Phaeo and Rhodophyta, green and blue-green. lichen, moss and plankton. Praise to nanobes and eukaryotes.

Praise to beach roses, pink under street lights; to peonies, iris and lilac; even at midnight inhale the scent; to the bees, safe in their hive, to evening clouds, white moon behind them; summer rain, watering the gardens.

Praise to writers and scribblers, fruit in the bowl, mat on the table, water in the mug. To the record on the turntable, the hat on the hat stand, the coat on the chair.

Praise to new parents walking a baby, to the restless soldier home from war. Praise to the peacemakers.

To poets, listeners to the night noises, cicadas, clapping of wings. To snorers and dreamers, singers in their sleep. Praise to the Earth, our home.

Words are Not Enough

Some days I realize that all I have is words which are not enough though I also have this body to push with its muscles and sinew the bit of strength in them and there is also music the sound of rain on canvas the roiling of waves my feet lead me to dunes or over stone bridges and the smell of moss, lavender, or grape iris and the taste of roses, fog, or salt in the wind creak of tree sap wails of nesting crows orange hills at dusk then indigo evening and limitless starlight which is more than I can fathom or just enough.

Yellow Dragonfly

After you met me in the park we sang Leonard Cohen’s

“Dance Me to the End of Love” on the steps by the church.

I played my samba for you, with the scat in it, bada daba daa.

After your car pulled away,
I walked down the municipal building steps, swinging my guitar.
A yellow four-winged dragonfly hovered above my car, buzzed by the window as if it had never seen a girl as if I had never seen a yellow dragonfly.

In Sometimes I Hear the Clock Speak, Lori Desrosiers, Salmon Poetry, 2016.
Vodka and Condoms bring vodka and condoms she said I heard her say it in a sotto voce whisper rough with fear and hunger like a cat in heat in a cage wanting something she couldn't ask for in simpler terms because the words had sharp edges nothing more than someone to tell her what is expected of her between the courses of life when she wants to be wanted as we all do under the influence of vodka and condoms Captain America and Bucky Bukowski word-slinging superhero sidekick.

fighting for freedom and the occasional bender.
born on my birthday, not the fourth of July, but he would have been the right age at the right time and how the history of the war might have been different with Bucky Bukowski teaming up with Captain America. going against the flow coming in low then exploding in an expletive-laden flurry of word-punches that got the thought across to enemies of free speech with the right to remain anything but silent.
Padparadscha

you alone will know where to find me
you alone I will not refuse the path broadens, then narrows.

stone to clay to dust to grass to stone again.
when the sun is at the right angle
I can see the long neglected spires.

home.

you alone will know where to find me
you alone I will not refuse

when the wind blows, it is from the South.
when the rain falls, it is down from the skies.
when the sun rises, I can see the edge of a world I have never comprehended.

you alone will know where to find me
you alone I will not refuse vacant streets save for the occasional ghost of seasons and reasons long past and cast aside.

a bride of dust. the pride of trust, forgotten.
I am home now, and there is much to be done.
home.

you alone will know where to find me
you alone I will not refuse

the trivialities of other, lesser cities. pale purgatories to one who has lived where the gemstones pierce the night and shed their light on the dreams of lovers.

you alone will know where to find me
you alone I will not refuse

find your way to me, when you can and will.
I will clear out the upper levels of the palace and lay new stone by my hands, black marble for the bare feet of acolytes who have fled.

home.

you alone will know where to find me
you alone I will not refuse

I hide in the open, so only the blind miss me. the tumbling weeds and hungry hornets pass by and acknowledge me not, for I am not relevant in the green waves of prairie grass they inhabit.
you alone will know where to find me
you alone I will not refuse

my voice echoes in the violent silence until... until the echoes find synergy and it sounds like a multitude, a host of fair heirs, chanting.
and all my words are of you. all my words are true.

home.

you alone will know where to find me
you alone I will not refuse

the dust slides on the smooth stone in the wind as the moon illuminates without heat and I shiver like a frightened child, alone to face the morning with renewed vigor.

you alone will know where to find me
you alone I will not refuse

trouvere. priest. worshipping one of seven.
penetration without flesh or even sound.
the riddle of scrimshaw on jigsaw people.
the towers shift in spectrum, but retain strength.

home.
you alone will know where to find me
you alone I will not refuse

two hundred and twenty three stairs, gently curving, and I am undeserving to ascend them, empty handed but for yet another sack of words, awaiting worms to feed upon me as I lay, sightless, forgotten.

you alone will know where to find me
you alone I will not refuse

the lotus blossom minarets whistle in the wind and I watch the dance of the stars, forgetting years and vows I had made, without malice or regret for I am caught up in the universe and the sky.

home.

you alone will know where to find me
you alone I will not refuse

my padparadscha prison was smoothed by hand and sand and now stands, neglected. too long. too long. and I am not an agent of rebirth, my muscles will be dust and rust before you find your way here.

home.
I rained poetry

there is no fear on the edge:
joy.
joy is what I find in the instants between moments when my feet are touching nothing but sky and the rocks recede to return.
sooner or later.
driven by grave gravity and the intemperate nature of natural law. but in the brisant moment, leaping from precipice to precipice, I am reborn, triggered and transfigured.

worn away are the chains of the pains of the stains of mortal mediocrity and I - I am one with the clouds.
and I rain poetry.
(for that is my nature.)

as you turn your face skyward to catch a few drops on a tongue parched by the dry air of memory and the sun of shallow sentiments, sold in the Hallmark rack in the name of mass seduction.

and I rain poetry.

to irrigate the fields of forever and make them ready for the seeds planted without your realizing it when you waved to me as I ran the cliffs high above the plains of stale acceptance.
and danced.
and danced.
and danced like a hurricane.
at the thought of you, naked in the rain.

and I rained poetry.

bringing the thunder at the appropriate moment when all other senses were spent and only sound could penetrate the wet shell of overloaded synapses. what passes for the echo of fire that surged and purged the very ions of our irony.

and I rained poetry.

calling the winds to lift me.
to gift me with the words that you would carry, eroded into your sandstone soul.
nevermore the monolith, but an aggregate of your essence with flecks of my pitchblende. bound to you by eloquence that quenched an ancient thirst, cursed to you in a garden you will never see except in the mirages of the maelstrom.

and I rained poetry.

and it was nothing.
compared to a single, honest kiss.
but it was,
in the absence of passion, a worthy golem in the armies of solitude up on the cliffs where I still dance with the winds. and call the thunder.
even when no one watches. or cares or dares to dance along.
(for that is my nature.)
so close to heaven.
so close.
I heard the distant music.
so close.
than you danced away like the stars at dawnning.
so close.
enigma and insult.
no anger. sorrow.
free will makes us all victims of our best intentions.
so close.
the feelings remain.
trapped in closets barely closed and visited when I need to feel.
so close.
International Beat Poet Laureate
Fight Arrogance - Do Die Without Sorrow ('Υβριν αμύνου - Τελεύτα ἀλυπος, Delphic Maxim)

All this love, which I can not even bear, All this endless worship, all this game with death!
A moth with black wings became a prey to the light to approach for a while and extinguish with it, falling onto it.
Who the hell am I, me to uproot the stars from the skies?
Who the hell am I, to go against the waves?
Who am I, to offend the sacred?
I'm the one I am!
I can not be otherway.
I give, I engage myself, I am strong.
I spend myself for what I crave Sacrificed for the ones I became one I fall in love with life
I catch fire falling on it.
Inspiration! I guess I do not have much time!
The gods punish Arrogance, cut the life's thread earlier, said my ancestors Let's get drunk then, with what is left!
Do not leave me alone, I crawl towards you as a humble supplicant..
Come with me!
Time is running out!
For how long malevolent Atropos* will sharpen her scissors;
You, do you hear me? Cut my thread, I want to go first!
I own my fate.
One thing I know, I don't need the wear.
But most of all... I know how to live, That's why I can even die, without fear.

*Atropos was one of the three goddesses of fate in ancient Greek Mythology. The one who was responsible to cut the human life's thread, so the one who was responsible for death.
Wish Happiness
(Ευτυχίαν εύχου, Delphic Maxim)

It is so simple to be happy!
Forget for a moment yourself and meet the joy in the eyes of your loved ones, now, before and after, all that you've collected in the balconies of your mind.
In Antonis's when you were kissing him, in Thanasis's when you were nursing him, in Despina's when teaching together, when Melina enjoyed the sea, when Catherine wrote her first poem, when Vasso was meeting you on Sunday in church, when Costas was confirming in front of you with a paper the laws of fall like Galileo, in Pericles's when you were sitting next to him, in Kiki's and Maria's when you were returning dizzy from your student nighters, in Vasilis's when married, in Costas's when you tickled his nose, when Fotis were analyzing to you ancient philosophy, in Stella's when she was talking to you about her big love, in Spiros's when he was dreaming.
Happiness is an endless puzzle full of memories, which accumulate yet, so you still can smile.
Be Suspicious Of None (Υφορώ μηδένα - Delphic maxim)

I'm walking towards you in open arms.
Without any shield.
Want to trust you.

My imperishable body is full of wounds bleeding, but so sweet because of love.

I look at you in the eyes, stranger!
Hit! I can stand it.
Waiting for you.

Belief in you from the beginning.
I still am vulnerable.
But no defence.

In my life's path I will always risk to know you as friend fully uncovered.

I do not follow any precautions won't lose what I'm able to be, innocent.
I will welcome you unrepentantly.
As much as the pain, more will be joy.

My caring smile brought you by my side I'm like a tree branch to your wind's blow.

Bending, not breaking, I need your breath my unknown brother, just to experience.

Wisdom and happiness your approach I won't confine you to any limit.

Looking forward for you openminded, I accept, I hope you'll bring the light.

It's just me, it's just you, like children let us play again in the same yard.
Respect Parents
( Γονείς σέβου, Delphic maxim)

Father, Mother!
You stood puzzled there back in the past.
I've charged you with the wings of an Angel, together with the horns of the Beast.
You are watching my today with embarrassment.
Am I or am I not the one you had dreamed the night I was sown?
I leer into myself on your criticism, sucking promiscuously your praise.
Egged on or pacified unexpectedly only by a nod.
You've been loved, embraced, fought with tooth and nail in your relationship, in society, against prejudices, against yourselves as I was watching, learning proceeding on these trails.
I am the vision in the nights of lust, the product of the fears, the firefly in the darkness of hesitation.
I create, spreading in future your genes being absorbing moisture from your principles and care.
I exist as a tree, the offshoot of your root.
And I 'm pleased, I suffer, I enjoy life, joy blessed by your persistence.
If I fall or get up die or awaken if I make mistakes in despair or in hope, fell in love or giving birth, you , there, rock-solid in the soil, helping my coming back.
I became conscient now, time revealed to me both your weaknesses and  greatness
I saw you at last completely.
The gap between us, an illusion.
You and I, as candle and flame we give a meaning in the perpetuation of the souls, the future of evolution, the cheating of Death.

I fight with tooth and nail in the battle of love, in society against prejudice, against myself increasingly submitting my respect on your path.
Till the fateful moment when you, nailed longer in the star-shining firmament, will encourage my war against the night.
"Where you were, I was and where I am, you will come "- told me grandma.
Follow God-Respect Entities-Test The Sacred ('Εποι Θεώ, Θεούς σέβου, 'Οσια κρίνε, Delphic maxims)

Well yes, it was not written for ever. It was for a while, just a sip, a contact, a threshold's exceedence. The lost truth mutually to be taught by the one to the other. Our conscience to be shaken, to be awaken, to be tested. We were looking for it by ourselves, Divine Grace provided, I do not know... I shun to talk about my beliefs, aloud. Besides what else could God be than the voice shouting in me?
State Beat Poets Laureate 2017-2019
He asked me what “BEAT” was So I told him, “Beat is NOT a “what” “BEAT” is an “IT”

It’s Jazz blues crying out on the night Of moody stars
Over a city that never sleeps

It’s a struggle of hard bones and empty bottles

It’s dreams left sleeping by the click-clack rail road tracks And dreams waking on beaches with the taste of last night’s drunk still in your mouth

It’s calling out your lovers name so loud
That it shakes the sky to brightness
Then moving through the day with fierce determination

It’s living present and feeling the perception That there will not be another day like this ever

It’s balancing feathers and driving around the world
With the stereo blasting through the interstellar air It’s blades spinning through psychedelic movements of wind Powering the light of the end of the world

It’s beat children struggling to save a beat plant
From plastic bags roiling in a radiated sea “Beat” is beat down, “Beat” is beat up “Beat” is life, baby!

Beat is when someone takes all you have then disappears into the fog of missing possibilities And leaves you there crying at a table set for one

Beat is when you don’t care anymore that you are beat And you just lean forward and listen to the flapping Of your shoes on the hot asphalt of A slow boiling summer’s day Beat is “Ya man”, Beat is “YA Man” Beat is “YA MAN, cool, Cool, COOL!

It breaks over you in waves of spent notes Spilling wildly from some musician’s pinched lipped horn
It eats into you like a hungry worm
Then wraps around you like a hot smooth woman
On a cool/warm night

Beat is the long slow cry of distant train whistles at midnight
In the middle of a long dark dream It’s knowing you are standing on a path Where one journey ends and another one begins

Beat is watching the vapor trails of airplanes Criss-crossing the sky’s and knowing That you will be somewhere else when Tomorrow burns a new experience inside you

It’s tapping shoes and nodding heads And wild screams when you can’t contain the joy that’s inside of you It moves your feet Propels you across the floor
And throws you into the arms of a pretty girl While the musician on stage is smiling because He feels it too
So he starts pounding the piano so hard
That the sound is flying out through the electric air
As the drummer taps his high hat of unexplored possibilities Beat is finding the rhythm in the poem Beat is life man, Beat is LIFE!
He was waiting at the airport for his wife to come from Syria

Three and one half years it had been since he had seen her smile as warm as the fresh baked bread she had fixed for him on the day he left to find this new life for the two of them far from the rattle of machine gun fire and barrel bombs cradled in his arms was a bouquet of long stemmed red roses the same color of the ones that once grew in their garden before the war came behind him was the conflict that had taken most of his friends and many of his family

He paced the newly polished floor in anticipation his new shoes squeaking with each step and he knew that with each step she was coming closer to him and this night she would be there safe in his arms again.
The snow flake are dancing around me
And I am smiling
Ginsberg is sleeping in Izzy’s basement And I am smiling as Dylan’s ghost throws down another whisky
And I am drunk on IPA
Charlie Chaplin taps his cane Listening to the thumping beat of Jazz mixed with old friends

Irene screams slam poetry Standing on top of the piano Where Tom Waits bangs out a new tune With a cigarette dangling from his lower lip

As the psychedelic Juke Box Drops another record onto the turntable of the world and Bessie Smith drones from the speaker where Miles blows his midnight horn

Marlene catches my eye with a wink
And we are dancing, dancing, dancing….
I had been delayed in my travels Retraced my errant steps back up the slow long hill, stopped when my lungs screamed for air

When I opened the door
The wind came in behind me
A chill of dark dreams danced in the corner Then moved across the silence of no clock ticking and asked why I wandered here

A faint line of empty chairs shifted The inevitable glass Of half emptied of whiskey Rattled on the three legged table

The bottle of emotion Resting prone upon the floor Found my hand around its neck
It whispered it’s sorrows to me In a sad lament filled with sighs

With a toast for no one who was someone once This cuddled day found my lips moving over The verses of his notebooks

The words tasted of sea and ash
As the night disappeared Into a sadness of stars that trembled in the raging light I got beat In San Francisco

I was blessed by beats in the holy temple of City Lights.
Slammed by word speakers in Seattle as Star Bars sparkled in my eyes.
Paloozed in a tent of hissing spoken word.
I was saved in San Diego by the POET'S TREE Sangria Lizzie dazzled me with her hot Spanish licks on my cool blue skin.
She left my heart beating like flamenco dancer’s shoes.
Oracle Mark waits at the intersection of Park and Washington with the angst of Market Street still on his Southern Comfort lips Hovering over me!
Smelling of a bad women in a deep blues dress.
"ARE YOU A POET MAN?", he kept saying,
"ARE YOU A POET?"
Man! I feel deliverance moving in.
Sprouting hairs from my chin.
My hands stroke bongo’s.
I got the beat, my hip feet hit the street, along sidewalks, past Kerouac's Alley, he was out with Sally, drinking again, thinking about going to Mexico.
Allen was howlin' in the fog that blanketed North Beach.
Bukowski!
Slummin' in the hotel of lost souls saying that POETRY just saved his ass.

Ferlinghetti lives in City Lights spends nights painting pictures by the window.

Beat, Beat, Beat, my feet hit the streets and I was out there, way out there man!
Silver plane giving me wings, my bags full of word things spilling from the shuttle that droned me home.

Dangerous Dan, the “word man" he met me at the gate, said that I'd be late for the reading needing readers.
Exceedingly tired
I pulled my felt hat down.

The POETMAN was back in town!
She Would Have Been From Decatur

The Florence Home was named after the daughter of New York drug maker Charles N. Crittenton. Florence died from scarlet fever in 1882, at the age of four. Distraught after his daughter's tragic death, Charles ...founded the Florence Crittenton Home to provide shelter for "erring and wayward" women. This label referenced the former prostitutes that the New York home first served, but it also reflected a widespread stigma surrounding any childbirth outside of traditional marriages at the time.

She would have been from Decatur, but that was before

That grim girl,
Daughter of Roy and Hazel Grimes Met that blond-haired Sailor, in from Great Lakes Naval Center North of Chicago.
That sailor, all cracker-jacked And muscled-fine with His post-war basics,

Training, in the bus station Ready to See the world. His girl

Barbara, Valentine
Box
Of heart, in hand Cherry-chocolate and soft-

Centered in her sneakers And felt poodled Skirt,

All Swirl, was swept up, Smoothed as sin, all skin And lips-

A coffined red

The silkiest of Satins-straight line to the Rest of her world.

Sat at the same Bus station, busting the button off, That broken zipper-Off

To the big city
No training for her Just basics, at the Florence Crittenden Home, For Prostitutes, and Unwed mothers.

Otherwise,

She would have just been Another girl
From Decatur.
Dark Matter: The Flesh of Fear

Out here at the end, where the galaxy Bends, and where I can look back in Through all the pinholes in the sky
I feel their journey into red Giants and the dead, Dwarves --Naked -- lonely as ice.

I take my clothes off too. Shake them Skin flakes fall, like snow: A whiteout—softly Becoming only infinity.

Or perhaps, then, they go beyond.

I have no directions, and There can be None. There is no return. I know that now.

It is obvious from where I stand
*The only way now : Is further We all used to know that. It was part of us.
We wrote it on our walls, on Our hearts and on our bodies.

That further was the only, not *Just a door out, but The only entrance, or exit
To anywhere.

I watch you struggle with the likes Of pictures, conjured: True as a hope That I can never understand. Imagining That

A deep need Can be manipulated, By your vision, as a tool, into flesh
As cool as smooth-skinned beauty Itself. A Peach-soft
And perfectly rounded. Sweet Without sustaining—even A single bruise in picking.

As if denying harvest, means that It was never of a cycle. But a spiral

Or, just the a Luck of the draw, the spin Of some wheel, always ISO-- All the right numbers, as if Love were as simple as the right calculation, a

Lottery, and if only it were played
Right, at the right moment. Time Would stop. No-- it would be suspended. No Rewound--But you Only find yourself re-wounded, bloody And red as a pit caught in skin-tight
_As stretched as pain itself._

Forever, inside the safe place. The canal to the next Nebula, pink ribbed as a vaginal hole, but emptied And so hard, and literal, that _I thought it was real._ Then you say, _Georgia O’Keefe was only painting_ Flowers. But grass needs to be cut, (they say),

Even in a desert. Even in a trailer park.
Where you tell me, I need to find my scissors too.
To free the fleas in the bush,

But I won’t--Cyber flowers never rot.

But you. No, you keep plucking your own Stardust of C H O N, and Dying it. Bleaching it. Picking it.

All loined--As fruit, still filled
As random possibility, disguised as truth Some stupid supposed proof, stating,

The lame--”Everything happens for a reason” Skillfully you disregard pus and age. So In the heat, I make you tuna

And you see her smooth fleshy thighs
In the pale pink meat. Your tongue imagines Creamy as mayonnaise, as forever

As Twinkies--and she is eating them
The Right Way-- no need to pinch them Or her years,

Into the correct waist-to-hip ratio.
But I am light years from there.
So you tell me. Don’t burn the French Toast. Put jelly on like Suzi did.

Both of us drunk. You tell me you hated her.
Your mother, but baby, I, am not dead.
And sometimes I feel an urge to forget

To wash my hands, and then To reach into the dusty batter
All egg and bacteria-- And create

A new star, a new planet--one for you To orbit. But the Milky Way is already too slippery, slathered in Butter-- Wrapped up. But left

On the distant counter

Only to be eaten, on some other day. _in the endless halo of the end._

I think to myself,

_What does one day, or two, or ten really matter?_
_And I know for me, it doesn’t._

But for you-- in the center, you are frantic Over the possible. Over the threat of the manifestation Into the real--of the elusive _dark matter._

And then? What will she think of your ....... ?

So. You ask me for celery. Then You lock your door.
As Stark As Our Scars

I don’t love you because love requires.
   It needs. Blood and breath to flow.
   No not like a river
   Not like thoughts

   It needs to move. Needs. A place of refuge From the likes of principle or even just the ears of The jealous, the prudish,

Where you seek for their approval, with a roll Of Duct tape.

Remove the sticky silver strips. Un-tape me.

I don’t love you because I jumped ship—while you Only jumped

Just another of your inflatable sharks-all soul Less as a Love doll--one made

For the fingerless, those Over--endowed with scaled eyes And fins.

A dark fin . A knife. Halves the street Between us. Demarking our sides.
It is flesh Blood, but not Flow. Just

A block. A clot.

I look out and breathe, yes - Only a sigh
Of relief. But I am relieved just the same that I can breathe it. Not

You. You just close your blinds. Turn up The static
And spew chum.

I don’t love you

Because

I am already Miles away. dark in the dark. Deep night in The deepest of night-oceans. Even split as we are
By the sharp crescent of moon, still

Venus appears. But you Only catch a glimpse.
And lose her.
I get up. Follow her. Across a long blue strip
A vein-chill trail, beneath the skin Of a black sky. Fresh as our

A shark

    Stark as our scars. Its Edges bending in the cold, to Embrace me.
That is All I Want --Really

That is All I Want
That is all. Really.
After last night
If you didn’t know already Why I hate your late night Internet--Hot tit and pussy hunts?
Now you must.
What did you say, you Were going to do, to her,
With her, give to her If she came To you—you telling me
As if saying, but she wouldn’t Come.
Mattered.
You said. She still hadn’t responded By the time, I took my Clothes off. All of them Off my perfect-imperfect body, and laid It down, for you—without Any of the promises you made To her being spoken--

At least not in years now, Naked, hip to hip in the Dark. You tell me, you humiliated yourself With her for me, to prove ...
But there we were in the glow of the Computer,

Exposed
To all the perils of flesh and bone.
The smells-- Too much, too little The bed, the room, the light-- Too dark, too Bright—the air-Too smokey, too perfumed, (you will Have --To wash your sheets-me the stench from My clothes)  Sweet And earthy but Not patchoulied—and my body
In the end. Just more porridge for reality Too hot, too cold. Too small, too big,

Never just right as Compared to that image, those Texts--The pictures, sent or not,

Of her—or some woman.
Any woman, “taking it”.
Looking
At her face, her gaping holes All body , All mind,  All soul-But much less.
You think I love too much?
No.
All I want is to wake up in the day
--Light.

Being okay
With my face, with my morning after—of Too-much
Vodka-breath, with small beads of my sweat-Sweet-as water, on my chest
And take in, the smell of last night’s love Still wet, and yours, warm

Between my legs,
As I heat up-- Like water for coffee,

And stand easy, by the stove in my robe
And slippers,
Make something simple,

That goes down so fine as you stand there With me, behind me, and fuck me,
"Good Morning". And we call it love,

Or not.
Just a man. Mine, and unafraid
Of my lips, my tongue, my mouth.
Weightless

I have on your sweater
But, you say, I can only put one arm Into one of the sleeves,

And leave the rest Hanging,

Trailing uncertainties
I can promise you nothing

Either, except for the promise of Massive risk

The debility of desire’s Deadly disaster;

The certain surety
Of the salty edge

Of insanity’s sting,
When it slides

Deep
Through the defining slice

Of a suddenly-sober skin As promised, I

Have no explanation
To offer for my heart

And it refuses to look For any, beyond

Being satisfied
To sleep

Beat-by-beat Across your chest.

No, I am not

A woman who knows What she needs

Even just to live
Beyond the next morning.
Because,

No, I don’t know,

And I won’t know, until That sun Rises.

And I will never sort through All of our inevitable wrong Turns-- looking back,
To see Where it was that we lost
Our way

Where it was we Became caught up

In this current Always headed, for Casual calamity

All I know for sure is That the mistakes, the grief

Yes, they Will be there,

Either way we turn.

That there is No other direction
No road
We can take, that does not Lead ultimately to ashes.

All we can do, is Choose Which skin it is, that We want to burn in.

Whose crazy pain we are willing To wear? Whose reality we will allow Ourselves to lie in,

Or whose truth we will invite To rest, still and unquiet-ed

Cradled, in our lap, our arms?

And oh, yeah, I do know that your grip on all of this, it Is shaky--as tenuous

As my own, still

My answer is yes,

I will put yours on Easy, close as my own skin-if you let me

---But that is not the real question ---Is it?

The real question is,

Whether, together

Can we bear it-

*The weight of each other’s

Fears. And, no, I don’t know, and Right now, I don’t care

--The quiet of afternoons Soaked in our sweat, in port Music, and poetry

Or maybe just some old DVDs-- will have to be enough.

As that is what we have here and now.

There is no other time, there is Nowhere else

Until, or even-- if-- we can Finally, ever realize, that We in fact, are weightless.

Ernel O. Grant - State of CT

Black Boots

Your left; your left; your left right left (3x) Black Boots…Black Boots…

I’m beaming, smooth, spotless, no dust; you could see your reflection in my glorious spit shine

I glide across the asphalt, head held high, moving to the cadence, strutting my stuff with pride

I am a lean mean killing machine, my drill sergeants saw to that and so one can test

I have my knife, my trustworthy friend M203, M16 with a grenade launcher to put anything to rest

I follow orders like a good ole boy; invading countries; taking prisoners while proudly saluting the American flag

I’m young, aggressive and impressionable so was molded to take out anyone and anything the US deemed as a nag

Your left; your left; your left right left (2x) Black Boots…Black Boots…

Oil fields are in flames as Black smoke enveloped the landscape; it’s 12 noon but nothing could be seen past 10 feet

Spit shine long ago faded; leaving beat up leather with grooves and matted dirt; I’m in a sense of confusion; feeling ashamed; what did I come here for?
Elated to be back in the states but lingering questions and uneasiness plague my brain; back to reality

So what I served for this country? Nigger please…I still have too much melanin and viewed as a threat to society

Passed over time and again for promotions; couldn’t get an in-house interview because I don’t match the demographics of the team

Cut my locks so I wouldn’t intimidate; put on their garb and speech; not to assimilate but merely to be seen

Black Boots…Black Boots…
I fking Hate You

Why do I feel so solemn, so helpless, so sick to my stomach?
Nose runny, eyes on the brink of overflow, heart speeding, body lethargic
But how could I feel all this when I’m not the one fighting for each breath?
What gives me the right to be so, so fking mad?
Feel so cheated?
Feels like life has dealt me a bad hand, feels like I’m weak, feels like I conceded
If I show a chink in my armor

But you fight even though breath to lungs hurts considerably
You keep fighting although you can no longer chew food You keep fighting although you are in continuous excruciating pain
You keep fighting although bones, lungs and brain are invaded by this silent killer You keep fighting when no one would blame you if you threw in the towel

My first memory ever was of you and the moments when you were getting ready to leave Jamaica, although we lost touch for decades when we reconnected it was as if we were never apart I feel, I’m human, I’m hurt, I’m distraught, but I have to be strong
I have to fight like you are So this is not a poem of admitting defeat, this is not a poem about someone giving up Instead it’s saying it’s ok for me to break down a little bit It’s ok for me to feel remorse, it’s ok for me to want more life for my kin
So cancer…yo cancer…I fking hate you

I f*king Hate You
My hands are on fire
Nov. 10, 2016

My hands were on fire
My hands were on fire
I beat the Djembe until my hands were on fire Mass hysteria, mass disappointment, mass confusion, mass uncertainty, mass fear & mass hopelessness.

There’s a lot of finger pointing, there’s a lot of division, a lot of hateful words & a lot of opinions. There’s a lot of conversations rooted in deep hurt and remorse. Dialogues with kids about what the future might be. What might be on the horizon? Armageddon just around the corner and in our near future.

I went to my open mic to bring some balance to the day, to get my thoughts together, to find some serenity and get my mind right. It took me awhile to get the music going but I was determined to let loose and vibe to some sounds. Hard beats after hard beats dominated the room, with artists like Nas, Mobb Deep, Fashawn and Most Def. I was in a groove and fed my appetite with more roughness, more hardcore music, with more emcees who were spitters and not just folks trying to duplicate and pimp hip hop for her cash. Something within made me realize the rhythms I was flowing to actually depicted my state of mind, my emotions, and my feelings.

My hands were on fire
My hands were on fire
I beat the Djembe until my hands were on fire
I put on an instrumental beat and sought to immerse myself in the flow. I grabbed my Djembe which was close by. Already blessed by a good brother with his thoughtfulness and understanding. I had an inner body experience where I felt taken over by a powerful force. It was as if I was feeling and playing notes that were not audible to me before.

My hands caught a rhythm and beats that I would not have created before, would not have visualized, and would not have felt so deeply about before, came to life. I let go, I surrendered, and I obeyed. I let the ancestors in, I moved with their guidance, I played their song. I’ve never thrown caution to the wind like that before. No music ever sounded so sweet, so clear, so wonderful, and so purposeful. I was beating the drums through my ancestors and they were not happy, they were so disappointed, they were so filled with anger and frustration. The drum, talked, it sang, it cried as I beat it for so long, so intense and so hard. I thought my finger prints would be left on the skin like bloody tattoos. I thought my flesh was left on the surface and my bones fractured and as if I would put my hands through the covering of the drum.

I let the moment run its course while gaining more enlightenment. My for-fathers had a message for me and my people. We are warriors, we are kings, we are the sought after, we are the strong, we are the universe. Let’s reclaim that glory, let’s reclaim that love for self, left reclaim that unity, and let’s take back that strength. Let’s stop being afraid, let’s stop the blame, let’s stop the in-fighting, let’s stop the hate, let’s unite. My face is on fire, my feet are on fire, and my calves can feel the burn.

My hands are on fire
My hands are on fire
I beat the Djembe until my heart is on fire Nightmares

I am often shaken back to reality by my wife. The snarls like a rabid animal fighting for dear life usually rips her from her slumber. I’ve been yelling, screaming, snarling and moving around uncontrollably in my sleep. Apparently I have been reliving different experiences and acting it out something fierce. I rarely remember what had me agitated and acting like a wild beast. Evidently I am still going through some type of trauma and it’s being manifested through these dreams.

Was I fighting against a force from the Middle East like I did back in 1990? Was I being abducted by aliens who wanted to do all types of experiments on me? Or was my body remembering and going through the struggles of being enslaved centuries ago? Those unspeakable acts are surely etched in my DNA. What is happening and why can’t I remember what I was going through during my nightmares?

I remember years ago waking up at a friend’s house and saw a worried perplexed look on her face. I didn’t realize at the time that I had one of my episodes which scared the mess out of her. I guess having a grown man suddenly yelling in her ear and tossing and turning didn’t leave a good impression. We saw each other a few times after that but that incident had us growing farther apart. There was no discussion as to what went down but it’s clear she thought I had mental issues. We eventually went our separate ways but I frequently wondered what she must have felt about my extraordinary behavior.
I am planning to get a way in a couple of months and have ideas of enjoying ATL to the fullest. In the back of my mind though I am a little uneasy. I plan on staying with a long-time friend but it worries me that I will have an episode and act up. Will he think I’m a crazy bastard who needs help? Will he look at me like I have a deadly disease? Will he look at me with judgmental eyes boring through my soul?

For years now I have been living with nightmares; and although I am not a big proponent for psychologists and shrinks; it appears I might need to see one. I am not sure what conversations will be able to do for me as I am a skeptic. I hear good reports of people being helped through dialogue so I’m open to at least try talking to someone. If my issues are related to PTSD or trauma from generations of slavery; how will I get better and have a chance to leave these nightmares behind?
February 9th, 2012. I’m caught between a rock and a hard place and it’s 3:30 in the morning as pain dominate my heart muscles as if I just lost a loved one to a violent crime. I’m still paying the doctors for previous emergency room visits believing everything will be fine soon.

I was informed there was no blockage so this must be stressed related. Should I throw caution to the wind and just chock this up as another event that will pass? Or should I put my trust in the hospital; this big money-making business? As I ponder my next action I found myself walking to my kid’s room. I watch them sleep and wonder if this will be the last time I see them alive. I cover them up, stared at them for awhile and kissed them on the cheeks.

If I go tonight it would mean I won’t get the chance to say goodbye to my oldest daughter. I would not get to finish the picture I’ working on for my mom’s birthday. How will my wife survive? How will she cope with the constant questions from the kids? Where is daddy and why did he have to leave us? Like a broken record playing the same blues over and over again.

How would my mom deal with the death of her son? It’s like Mary accepting the crucifixion of her only child. How will she overcome the pain? I think back on all the abuse she has overcome but know that this would be biggest blow to this gentle being.

I’m caught between a rock and a hard place.
I tried to calm myself because worrying won’t change my situation. Should I go to the ER again just to be told: Mr. Grant your heart looks great so this must be stress related or should I prepare myself to meet my maker? After a few minutes of pondering my situation I decided that I have left a good impression on this world and wish the best for those closest to me.

I realize I am merely following the path that has been laid out for me. If this is my last night on this earth I must say that I am proud of some of the things I was able to accomplish. We live and we die, that much is certain and I now have a sense of unbelievable peace and calmness.
Paul Richmond - State of MA

The Lost Cafe

I didn't have much money
So I order the cheapest items on the menu
I ordered a kids portion of French toast
I was brought a pile of Blueberry pancakes With ice cream on the side

I ordered a small side dish
Of home fries
I received a plate of grilled steak, sausages, and bacon
Which the waitress said came with the large plate of home fires
I ordered a small orange juice
I was given a large pitcher
I said I'd like some coffee And the pot was brought over I ask the waitress what was going on She said this is how it is here
I said wow
I want to live here
Just then
My alarm clock woke me
In the cold kitchen
I found I was out of eggs
The milk was sour
The mice had gotten into the cereal Looking out the window
I couldn't see the corner store
The snow was a white curtain with a howling wind That wouldn't have stopped me But My wallet was empty

I went back to bed
I lay there Eyes closed tightly Knowing
I wasn't going to find that cafe

This is from Paul Richmond's third book “Too Much of a Good Thing – In the Land of Scarcity Breeds Contempt”
The Card Game

People have been playing for generations Many just didn't know they were playing You know you are playing When someone says
Are you playing the race card
Are you playing the sex card Are you playing I should feel guilty card
I was dealt the cancer card
I am playing get out of jail card
I have the power card
I win the argument card

Some play I believe in Jesus card
Some are creating their own deck

The person on the phone said Sir I am not allowed to talk to you I can't give you any information Or tell you anything since we don't find The papers you say you've filled out 5 times

All I wanted to do was cancel some appointments Stop medications coming to the house
We will have to talk to your father
They started to hang up I played the dead father card
My father died Silence
I am sorry

I just want you to cancel the appointments and all medications

I can do that

(You just need to know how to play your cards This is a new poem to be published in Paul Richmond's 5th book.)
Lost Wallet

When the camera zooms in To focus on the main character
He is just about to go out Suddenly he realizes he doesn’t have his wallet
The search begins
He traces his steps Looks through his pockets Opens up the bags he has with him Looks in the car
Under the seat
It must have fallen out of his pocket
In retracing the steps
He thinks that he came home with it That it has to be somewhere in the house Now he’s running out of time
He was going to go out Meet some people

The camera zooms back
To take in more of the scene of this main character And lying on a couch Is a woman
They have been lovers
For 11 years
They live together
She was feeling low energy all day
On trying to figure out what they might do He suggest meeting some friends At a political talk A Woman who has become Famous
For asking the President
Why did her son die in Afghanistan?
Why were we in the war?
She was here in town Speaking at the local middle school

He asks did she want to go
She says Why?
To hear about how fucked up things were She feels she knows what is going to be said Isn’t inspired by these talks
She doesn’t want to go Says she has no energy for anything Nothing inspires her She apologizes Says it was nothing personal
She just doesn’t have any energy
He doesn’t try and make an argument for going He is ready to go alone

Back to the lost wallet Getting frustrated for time is getting late He can’t find it
He doesn’t want his life to be like this Looking for lost wallets Life is going by
He has now searched the same places twice Three times
He has to admit it wasn’t anywhere to be found He can’t leave until he finds it Suddenly feeling sick to his stomach
He goes to the bathroom Diarrhea
Had the flu about a week ago
All of a sudden He’s in the bathroom again
On coming out He thinks to look on the table again
He thought he took everything out of his pockets
He checks the table again Starts to clear the table He moves her purse and there it is Her purse was on it Now He has the wallet
But suddenly he needs to hit the john again Thinking of his father Who complains that he has diarrhea all the time And blames it on a new food that he thinks gave it to him His thinks he’s turning into his father Then he looks at the clock And realizes how much time has gone by The event is starting
He is still standing in his kitchen
He is 30 minutes away with more stomach rumblings Feels like any moment
He will need to run to the john again
Not a great incentive to go out

This isn’t quite the story line of a thriller
A cliffhanger
Where you are sitting on the edge of your sit Instead our hero is sitting on the toilet Wanting his life to mean something

This poem was published in Paul Richmond's second book “Ready Or Not – Living in the Break Down Lane ”
A well-dressed Man and a Dog

A well-dressed Man Walks into a bar
With a Dog
The Bartender says
He looks really mean
He looks like he wouldn’t listen to anyone
He looks like he would kill for no reason I don’t want him pissing and shitting in the corner
And can you get him to stop humping the bar stool

And the dog says
You can dress him up But he is who he is

(This was previously published in Paul's first book No Guarantees – Adjust & Continue) Pep Talk

The word on the street is We're Fucked

Nothing is going to change
Is the daily propaganda

It's useless to try Becomes the Mantra

There is mounting evidence
By the military personal and vehicles
That are surrounding us
That this is not going to be a party

There are many who will argue That the studies have all been falsified

I am afraid to break it to you all That it is much worse than reported

Now is no time for despair

Even if all the means Have been deployed to destroy Our communities
You would be amazed
At our ability To create
What we need

I know many of you are wondering Just what is the catch How much is all this going to cost It always comes down to that

It is obvious
That it is way more then we bargain for There are no sales
And even at the lowest price
The price is too high
It has been scientific proven Depending on my hunger
I will eat anything

Which God
To pray to Don't all of them
Have the message of love Compassion
Helping those who are down Seems to fall on deaf ears
As the killings continue

Now that we gathered around the collection plate
Many of you are asking How much should I give If you are asking me
I say
Give it everything you Got
Give it everything you Got

This was published in Paul Richmond's fourth book “You Might Need A Bigger Hammer”
The Rugby Match (an excerpt)

Fuck you, Constable! And fuck yo’ cunty queen. And fuck god. And fuck yo’ bloody anthem and yo’ bloody fuckin’ football match. God Save the Queen, me ass. A wee prat, eh. What I see beyond the mucky gang ways a you pissed up wanks and all dribbly eye over yo’ bloody queen muvva who certain as the ghost a Maggie Snatcher don’t care a tripe a cocks and corks a the likes a you.

And no, I ain’t got no concourse wif them Wasp RFC blokes. Them’s what pummel Pakis, pikeys and junkies. And in no regulated order. And I not be at Coventry for a barney. Just for the love a sport. Though I will say, barneys do seem ta be the consequence of an unmitigated scrum. Yet here I be detained for me own safety, the bulls say, and for maintainin’ domestic tranquility. All what I take ta mean keep the bloody bosky London hooligans in the pens.

Course the coppers nicked me stash. There be warrant why the evidence room be called the chemists. Don’ choke on me K, constable. And, mind ya. Lizzie’ll have her cut from her familiaris a the East India Company while the Chinks and Pakis grace us wif takeaway.

I do. I do. I hates this bloody country. And I hates the god what slime its anfem. What a ol’ Cambridge prat call misopatria, hatred a country. And it’s A side, misotheism, hatred a god. There be no bloody aut’entic god here, but the hurt and the terror a sufferin’ and deaf what lurk inside every bird, bounder and bloke. And what that clever Hebe Einstein call patriotism, the measles a mankind, he did, and as infantile as bouncin’ a ball about.

Bloody fuckin’ football match. But, I tells ‘em, me Nellie be a bit finical after me fenty and bam brunch. But, nooooo. We be short a Becks and Posh. And what be me given gift but ta daddle a poke or two.

What warped a me wits what be the anfem me tony blare:

‘God fuck our musty queen. She be so bloody mean. Long stink her quim. Drip her vice over us. Sotty and scurrilous. Long ta leach off a us. God jizz the queen.’

What some tupence tories take offense. And the beatin’ commence. Whilst I chime ‘What our god Load arise, from Lizzie’s rancid thighs…’ And I be hauled off scatterin’ me enemies - and many a friend alike.

Hey Bronzy! Bronzy. I fancy a curry take away. There be no bloody Ghandi up in here, Bronzy. I be Lee Marvin.

Don’ get me wrong. I love bloody rugby. The scrum a the earf. But not like some, what some public school trickster name a ‘Johnny’ Ellis ripped it off the almighty a full two weeks before Promfeus nicked fire from Zeus.

Oi. Me mates be ignorant, made daft a football. What aft a pint or ten, they be so lost in their ignorance they tear up and celebrate their own oppression and gnash on ‘bout the ol’ Queen Muvver.
God and country be bloody lies and rooted in evil. And ‘god the lie’ makes holy the converse a evil such that its roots be held firm by naught but god’s filf. What plays about the mind but empty signs and Promefean prattle?

You’d believe Promefeus be a god hisself if Aeschylus had his fancy. Nuffin’ but stagey twattle about a bloke what nicked fire from that geezer, Zeus, and who a that cattle rustler Hermes or that fruit filchin’ caprice a god, Eve, we mankind be consequent in our destitution. What say we be comin’ ta the end a our run and takin’ hostages and wif our evolutionary thumbs waste worlds blastin’ away at phantoms. What compare to some pogey, curry and swipes, thieven’ be honest work and dun it make me and mine heroes a all mankind as we but emulate our betters and their Promefean ways.

Proudhon says all goods is dodgy. And I say all good deeds is dodgy if ya boost ‘em to a phantom. Like when ya fence your sins at confession turnin’ them into a wash up. It’s all be bloody cosmic hokum. When fools be prayin’ ta the gods, beggin’ his forgiveness, they just be chattin’ up themselves. Lookin’ for a spotless Piccadilly for their conscience, they mumble and burn incense before these phantoms.

That’s why the divine fucks be made in our image. Dicks, twats and all by some accounts. ‘Cept for the shite and piss part what usual get left off, but for them old foregone guineas, thorough prats wif one Sterculius, a god a butt muck and mire and Cloacina, goddess a the shite what filled drains and mains.
We had our Promefeus out a Hackney by the name a Li’l Creepy. Creepy boost cars from Leadenhall ta Knightsbridge. Knickin’ chariots from tin pot Chelsea Apollos. And don’t them rich prats see themselves as modern Promefeuses? What the yank oligarchs even wager themselves ‘job creators’ like they be deadbeat dad’s of all of us wee folk. What sets me ta jokin’ those cunts be Job creators alright wif their plagues and trials a derivatives, quantitative easin’, fraud and fiat curren-cies. Make many a bloody international suicide hotline, that lot do from Indian farmers to Ohio machinists. That bloody vicious, bunch a paternal tossers. Li’l creepy got 14 years in the jug for attemptin’ ta nick Lizzie’s Bentley. Eight for carvin’ up the lambswool sateen. And that be the tale and tellin’ of it.

God be a right moody geezer. Be he Zeus or Yahweh, the ol’ creeper giveth and he taketh, fucketh and raketh. The ol’ knobber got everyfing. Leave somefin’ on the table, yah bloody blighter. Not like god needs his Boneham and Turner ta crack a safe or Arfur Anderson ta cook his books. But don’ he sound some simple wealfy prat wif sociopathic inclinations drippin’ boar’s blood gravy over his $300.00 Ermendildo tie at Alain Ducaisse’s Chop House.

The heart of it be: How can one hate god and love football? What one sport ratchet up the passion a the ovver. What ta lose ta Uxbridge by 3 points because your best rugger fractures his tibia on a sloppy track at the opponent’s goal.
Indeed, there do appear a bit a skullduggery don’ it. Like god bog down the Nappies and Huns at the Bear.

Proudhon called god “the tormentor of my reason. The spectre of my conscience.”…“Every step we take in advance is a victory in which we crush divinity.” So fuck the bloody anfem and the god and queen bore in it. Hey, Old Bill! Billy! I’m feelin’ a bit peckish. Where’s me bloody curry!?”
Velius suffers a bout of indigestion and shits in his host’s wine goblet

(An excerpt from the epic, Canus Ictus in Exilium (Dog Bite in Exile) )

Contrary much ta agita Velius Cesinus inclines

What he sit erect and brood and mull Wif his hands cupped up what he be a beggar

What his thumb oppose as be a teacup
A transit what be most exposed.

For he by Bodai riddle know

If guinea meet the master on the road
He dispatch such wif knowledge a Bodai say so or no.

Most likely ‘no’ for such be guinea sport.
And what opulence be ta a beggar Bodai What sort live on aefer.

While a follower a this Paul a Tongues

Live on the scraps a his masih’s bung.
And our cynic? He be upturned in a prelate’s bin.
But Bodai do profane as he be what spoon wif celebrity.

And

These Paulites do con the rich and poor alike Wif palavers a afterlife what not sport
The heart nor soul a any holy bloke’s Epicurean delight

But by inconstant promises and foretokenin’s, Where but obstinate and contrary the cynic be.

His riddles not dodge or glance at truf but air it inside out.

100 Still me Velius need relief but by guinea custom What exit the table be naught as grief and censure upon the host.

So Velius’s guts slosh wif meat and wine
Be it ta ape by grunt and growl an Affluvian tumbler
A lime and gravel, water and clay.
He what defrutum and spiced pears make a soupy mix.
So after much grumble and visceral dismay,
The gates a Acratopotes burst away,
And Velius drops a deuce in Apicius’s cup
A rather fulsome load I must say.
As our hirsute harpy from the rafters swings
What be his gangly limbs as they be wings
And spew afore and shite behind He spin as a pinwheel about its axis as Aloft a buffet a few what cater equal to What cranky Zeus put on display.
The same what befoul wif Snatcher shite Take the breaf a blinded Phineus away
A bloke what saw much and jabbered more By what Argonauts be return ta the Thessalian shore.
Or awful coils, winding ziggurats a filf what Scatalogus ascribes, Titan stool still steaming at the brink Noxious such stink what knock the Harpies from the sky And gack wif vile excrement
What be a foul frescoe a Sodom’s slutty cultae, Etched at our dear Pompeii.
Vesuvio rear his arse
What the Plinys regard from across the bay And wiser than his uncle,
   The nephew demurred and stayed away
For the Younger heed the words a sage Loquatus what say, “Objects fall what seek their lawful destiny”
And far be it such a promisin’ augur
   As fledge Pliny stand in Decima’s way.
   For Pluto broil a right spicy buffet
   What as wise Varro say Vulcan’s one-eyed minions Devour in stews, casseroles and cakes Laced apparent wif ghost peppers and onions Such be the souls a what depart dispense What be a nosey foretaste before we cast ‘em inta holes.
As wise Scatalogus prescribe,
   At birf we be but a honeyed goose,
   What ripe rejoice the leavin’s What exit our Jordan bound caboose.
As be our Gallic Queen Gargamelle Once relieved a vat a its tripe smell Want the more be shed a her babe, Gargantua, Her wailing, wanton heir
   Who desperate a drink deposit from his queen mum’s ear
What her bum plugged so severe it occlude her cooch Wif herbs a some drunken midwife An ironic cork what keep our Sprig from his hooch.
The Central Ohio Fixin’ to Die Blues 1966 (in two parts)

1. Deer Hunting
The welcome sign to Argosy State Park was constellated with buckshot.

And every maggot in the woods seemed to exalt in the fact

That you’d be postin’ there sooner or later.
My cousin Donny, who had his leg blown off below the knee at Khe Sanh,

And a plate in his head

Has been using his BAR as a crutch ever since we left the trail.
They may be kin, but they also may have dragged me up this mountain to kill me.

So I hang back with my safety off a battered M-1

That has as my cousin Marco puts it, “S’been in the shit.”
Back in camp, he starts on me, “How come you ain’t gone?

A skinny, little guinea shit like you is a tailor made tunnel rat.”

“That supposed to be some kind a joke, faggot,”

He sneers as he jerks toward me.

My cousin Gino grabs him around his shoulders.
“What, you gonna beat down your cousin?
    What would your Aunt Lucia gonna say?” “Fuck you Gino. Look. Look at Donnie,” drunken, k weed tears in Marco’s eyes.
    “He’s all fucked up.”

In the morning its bacon, beers and weed.
    All the big talk about bagging an 8 point has evaporated.
Adamo and his friend Mac, two tours each, go off into the bush to fix.
Ricky climbs into his GTO to return to Dayton.
    Steve and Vito collect themselves and ask me If I want to come along and “shoot something”?
    Squirrels, coons, niggers. Anyfuckin’thing?”
I say, “Fuck off.” So they add smirking, “We were just jokin’ about the squirrels.
    C’mon. C’mon. We ain’t gonna do no time for shootin’ no niggers.”
We make our way up the trail a mile or so When suddenly they break
    And cross a gully to a dirt road where Ricky waits idling the GTO.
Ricky peels off. When I get back to the main road every one is gone And I’m left hitching 80 miles to Belmont.
I shatter the stock of the M-1 on a rock And toss the battered gun into a thicket leaving it for the maggots.

An old codger with a flatbed loaded with empty chicken cages picks me up.

We introduce ourselves. “Hi, my name’s Trader. Trader Home. Though some call me Sonny,” he offers.

“Traitor?” I hear.

“No trader. Like a fur trader,” he chuckles. “Where ya headed?”

“Washington DC, I guess.”

“Ya mean ya don’t know?”

“Well, I was staying with my people in Dayton. But we don’t much see eye ta eye on some things.”

“That so? So you’re from Washington? Are you some kinda politician?

You ain’t one of them lobbyists? Are ya now?” He chuckles, then,

“You like baseball, son.”

“Yeah. I played some in high school,” I say edgewise.

“Well, I pitched in the majors back some. Yeah, I played for the 1929 Cubs. Went 1 and 1 in 11 games, all but one in relief.

Struck out 6. McCarthy didn’t use me in the Series though.”

“Oh yeah? Joe McCarthy? What was your ERA?” “Ah no need ta go there boy. Look it up.” And later I did.

Sure enough if the old man was who he said he was,
He pitched for the ’29 Cubs right next To Rogers Hornsby, Hack Wilson, Kikki Cuyler and Charlie Grimm.

“Ya hungry kid. I know a diner. Best shortstack And hash browns this side of Cleveland. Ya like eggs.

I love eggs. That’s my business, now.”

So I thought fuck the draft board. Fuck my cousins. Fuck Dayton. Fuck the war.

I was on the road eating the best short stack
This side of Cleveland with baseball royalty.

2. Trader Home and the Hitchiker

3.
I don’t want ta talk no more baseball.

It’s all a blur to me now no how.
I drank then. Mostly with Hack Wilson

You know Hack used to drink white lightnin’ out of a thermos.
I raise mostly Comets and Reds. Best egg layers.

Boy, I think our pretty little waitress is partial to you.
Why don’t you take a run at her while I go to the crapper.
Deconstructing the Demiurge: the Burden of Meaning (excerpts)

Man is not Nature’s substrate, Nor its alternate.
How to be done, to say it all Before the darkest dawn.
The grand concordance of existence, Plunging time into mass.
And theory that mass can’t account.
    The ruthless mutuality of microbes and men.
Entropic whispers. Dark matter.
    The great chain from the infinitesimal to the colossus.
    And the collapse of the eigenstate into consciousness.
And yet Cern’s ‘god’ particle, mathematically predicted, Rendered no augury
    For the death of the project’s chief engineer.
And again, without exception, mortal ubiquity Defies precise arithmetical bodings.
“The gods call us back,
    And forbid mortal eyes to know the end of things.”
So Pedo’s shipwrecked epic or what flotsam remains.
All prelude, a simple spatial prophecy calibrated
    In the bow string, the bomb and the stars.
    All projectiles calibrated toward their destiny,
As close as fortune has come to telling.
    Numbers that weave a digital sarcophagus in the birth canal.

Brittle, jagged, craving the tensile condition
So that it may fall out of mathematization And back into existence as proof,
The algorithmic prophecy of launch pad to target.

Without mass will the neural net hold that rock; that moon
Where a ‘dark matter’ prevails?
Yet among all of this quantum watching,
The rush of data occludes at time t,
This vain observer and the observed, Fail as often as not to be either.
The quantophrenic sacking of the moral psyche, Grief still imposed.
None would confirm that his end may come too soon.

***

Mind that box of bolts, that pile of flashing, the sawdust of stars,
Left over from reverse engineering Creation.
The Seventh Day was spent quietly on the estate in the Berkshires.

On the sixth he took a conference call with Marvin Minsky, Elon Musk
And Ray Kurzweil on the viability of eliminating the human race
And replacing it with sentient nano-bots
And received a full-color holographic catalogue Of genetically engineered animals From his ranch in Costa Rica.

On the Fifth day came Word that the seas
Had been fished to extinction
And his standing order of Bluefin sashimi had been cancelled.

And you thought perhaps that “I [myself] should have been a pair of ragged claws”

But likely not, such be your pitiable self.
Where decades before Oppenheimer had engineered A more expedient end boasting “Now I am become Death, the destroyer of worlds.”

To which again Pedo’s ghost, “Why are we violating alien seas and sacred waters?”

The night before the stars were again veiled.
The Sun having scorched anonymous billions,

And on the Third Day a continent of ice collapsed

And the barren sea overwhelmed the abandoned shore.
All the while the demigods shed, merge, divest, change shape,

Gods casting the shadow of beasts over mere mortals.
Monsanto Co. of St. Louis, MO compounds the very dust of the earth With debt and suicide.
A miracle of biblical contortions.
Genesis 1:12. “Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust," Genes hoarded in banks, and money in clouds
To portend our bizarre, fanciful end.
And the corporations have devalued god’s currency
As though by fiat
And forged masterpieces of Armageddon.
Peisander

Peisander of Camirus, who gave Herakles that cave man look;
   Lion skin about his loins and churlish club
Like a hand hewn Louisville Slugger made of battered cherry wood.
   That Alley Oop pose much in vogue today, Internalized by a cartoon culture,
   That has spliced copy-cat with vulture.
Enduring, though as Clement claims your tale, Albeit but that the Labors are 12,
From the Nemean Lion to the Augean Stables To the Capture of Cerberus.
   All else pirated from one Pisinus of Lindus, more lost to time than even you.
Neither text survives. Pisinus not a word.
   Peisander but 3 shards;
Two from the Scholiast in Aristophanes
   And one from Stobaeus.
But when extant the Alexandrian Grammarians “thought so highly of the poem
That they received Peisander Into the epic canon together with Antimachus, Panyasis Hesiod and Homer.”

Is it enough to endlessly compete in Elysium
   So myriad be the affairs of the gods?
To route Eupolis and Pindar from Olympus
To take the laurel and dispose of Agathon and Sophocles.
Or witness after your burlesque of the mocking Archilocus himself dangling from a tree.
Those contented with mortal judgement;
Jousting for time’s sullied perpetuity.
As, in accord with Caecilius of Calacte, Menander to Philemon
"Are you not crimson with shame Deemed victorious over me?"
So those in life
Who gain Fortune’s indifferent victory. beautiful lies (dedicated to Yevgeny Yevtushenko) they are all so lovely so appealing the low hanging fruit of an infinite social orchard we sit there glutinous debauchery covering our faces cascading from mouth’s corners pooling between our naked breasts yet still we desire more failing to devour each other leaving dismembered lives in our wake breathing gasping for love

light a simple touch from caring hands holding more than memories sentimentality the devil’s promise of enlightenment and well-being i’ve eaten mangos unclothed in bed with the most beautiful liars and include myself among the fallen among those who believe enough time has been spent choir loft sitting with my ilk fallen angels convinced of perdition without a glimmer of heaven passing through stained glass prophecy as clouds will have their way mitigating the passage of whatever truth might be left in this age of wonder i smile embracing the abyss the great void between fish and fowl a rainbow embracing the absence of light arching through various imaginary ecstasies transcendent in a universe where gravity is a given i float delighted knowing that between point a and point b lay the realm of the infinite the undefined whispers within sounds which comprise our collective howling i consider amplifying every heart which beats upon this rock if only for one moment each rhythm partial to the whole the steady vibration the hum
the motion which gives dark matter its weight an audible measure of all speculation made so loud that the inevitable becomes palpable

i can taste it reason and its lacking licking my skin until reflections undergo a metamorphosis and i can look into my own living eyes one and separate two and whole seeking a box to check which simply says other gravity is just a theory

we all feel the weight making a living forgetting to make a life tip toe away from the places which hurt decorate dead trees to celebrate birth and we glow but it is a nauseating light battery powered tea candles without regard for wind water elements which exist beyond our own personal chemistry the sphere of influence which draws others close the jingle of keys in shaking hands possess a magical power they change our prisons into homes inside we sing oh silent night because the silence is too much because the candles won't ever flicker because time passes because life is a virus infecting the perfect body of death (she shakes her head keeping her distance if only to prove entropy
-the only law to which she is subservient)

because blue is the color of the sky pretending to be innocent because after all it's only a theory resisting inspiration by unwanted syllogism trite semantic arguments litter the floor of the sanctuary it's all gold and flash sleight of hand tongue in cheek ready to bite at first feeding peeling cellophane away from manna without regarding the nutritional information required by man's law once the incense stops burning there is an empty feeling the hollow created by decay once the worms have finished corrupting the convocation while considering ginsberg's list of everything holy running mad and naked toward neon exits falsified profits and an illusion of everlasting strife it's a zero sum gambit threads of ecstasy warping though the primordial fill a forbidden paradox woven to be worn only by con men and those saved when the wine is all gone

i wish there were a god who would take responsibility for all the shenanigans instead of just the wonder i wish there were angels fighting a heavenly battle keeping the forces of evil far from my peaceful slumbers

i wish there were a heaven where we all could meet again all the faces i have loved drink tall drinks and dance

i wish there were a hell with demons i could blame when i transgressed hurting those most close yet i remain grateful for the light of this day reflecting off of the tree outside my window grateful to witness flowers which bloom and die my connection to ants which crawl across toes full moons and half moons floating upon celestial oceans the stars which fall and those which stay in the sky

i am grateful for all that i know the unanswered questions best left 'til tomorrow when the wine is all gone
In 2001
My sophomore year of high school
I got the new Gorillaz CD
They were a cool band
With cool songs
And this CD had 15 of them.
So thankful we had come so far from the days of Records
8-Track tapes Cassettes
My CD player Came everywhere with me
Going through the anguish
Of trying to fit the big round device Into regular-sized pockets
I would listen to my songs While walking in the hallway between classrooms
I had my favorites on the CD But listened to all of them Got to know all of them Just me and the band’s music.
Little did I know
That by the time of my 10 year high school reunion
The devices we’d have would be 15 times smaller Hold over 15,000 songs on them And that it wouldn’t be very often That anyone would listen To an entire album Anymore.
911 As A Sophomore

It started out like any other day
Second week of my second year Of high school Second period
Math class
Going through the anguish
Of trying to concentrate When still half asleep Not yet used to the early days again After summer
The announcement came in the last 5 minutes of class “Boys and girls, we have just received word That there has been a terrible accident at the World Trade Center.”
An accident
I remember that wording specifically None of us really knew what to make of that A moment later the bell rang
And I got up to go to third period business class Taught by Mr. Campbell
The most laid back Hilarious teacher
Only a few year away from retirement
And as a veteran of the Vietnam War
Not one to take the silly dramas and trials Of dealing with teenagers too seriously.
Upon entering the classroom
The television
One of the few active,
Non VCR/DVD player-only televisions That happened to be in the classroom Where we normally had class
By pure happenstance Was on Turned to the news.
We didn’t do any classwork that period Watched the footage
Of the first plane
Followed by the second plane Saw one of the towers collapse live Saw a replay of the other one
The smoke growing and growing
We were all very confused
No motive or reason had yet been released
The casualty numbers were climbing Two classmates from that period excused Sent to the office
Where they could make phone calls To try to find out information About their parents who worked In the city.
And Mr. Campbell
Standing there, arms crossed Shaking his head
With a somber Sullen Saddened look
That I never saw on him before Or since “You don’t know it know,” he said, “but this is going to be the day that will define your entire generation.”
More than a decade later I can only say How right he was.
Checking The Eggs

The very small woman with the very loud voice sitting in her very awkward shaped car that she drove very awkwardly through my drive-thru, screams at me in a very awkward manner: “Two dozen eggs and a half gallon of milk and make sure you check the eggs this time!” I sigh, wondering if ever such a time existed where I gave out eggs that had not been checked. “Yes Ma'am, that's company policy!” as I ready her order.

Opening up the two dozen eggs to check each one thoroughly, both sides of the eggs I do so in an overly obvious fashion so that she can see my efforts.

I tell her the price, ring in her small crumpled dollar bills, bag her order and walk over to hand it to her.

“The eggs aren't cracked, right?” she asks as I give her the items.
I realize at this moment that she must be the kind of person who sees 8 people waiting in front of a lobby elevator but still has to press the button herself because it wouldn't occur to her that it just MIGHT have occurred to at least one of the other 8 people waiting to do so before she got there.

My mind runs through a list of appropriate responses, including: “You saw me check them all here right in front of you—and yes they are all cracked, but I decided to give them all to you anyway.” And, I wish that such a response would not get me suspended.

Instead, I sigh and calmly reply. “Don't worry, I checked them all, they are fine,” with a horribly forced smile.

“Good!” she squawks back. “Because I can't tell you how many times I've gotten cracked eggs from here!” No sooner does she say this than she grabs the items through the window, THROWS them over her shoulder into the non-cushioned back seat and drives away.
Phone Call Request

I knew even before she got to the window from the way her car zig-zagged back and forth as if she was drunk though she wasn't-- that this one was going to be interesting. "Do you sell laundry detergent?" "No, Ma'am." "Could you check?" "No need to check Ma'am, we have never carried cleaning items." "Could you call your other store in Commack?" "We all have the same items ma'am, they won't have it either." She stares at me and thinks for a moment. "Could you call the Dairy Depot up the street and ask?" I tilt my head. "Ma'am, that's our competitor." "Can you call them anyway?" "We don't do that Ma'am, and I don't even have their number." "I have it right here." She waves a piece of paper. "So, you want me to call our competitor for you to ask if they have a product?" "Yes." "No." Her face turns red. "Why not!?" "We can only call stores within our chain. Sorry."
"You're supposed to go out of the way for your customers!"
"That's true. But nothing you have done in the time you have been here falls within the parameters of you being a customer of OURS and speaking of which, there is another car behind you that's been waiting."
After she drives off in a huff, I help the next customer without incident of insanity.
Just Hanging Out

“Wanna hang out?”
“When?” “Friday Night?”
“What time?”
“8?”
“What do you wanna do?”
“Food?” “Where?” “Apps?” “Sure.”

In making these plans I remember a time When friends would converge Randomly
Unplagued by classes
When work was a part-time thing Meant to give you pocket money
To make your own adventures And hanging out
Was not preempted
By a shopping list of specifics
When people weren’t so rigid With their likes and dislikes Their dos and don’ts
When we still had space
And time
To find out new things about ourselves Let the chips fall where they may
And the company you kept Was the only constant That you needed.
Viviana Grell - State of NY, New York City

I Want My Own Word

Woman you say I am... but no I am not Take m.a.n. from woman and you have a WO!!
I want my own word...
Man is a free word.... stands alone and I as WO will grow on my own,

I break free from the man MENstruation
MENopause
I MANipulate this tongue
No dick(tionary) to define my soul oh no.. I am a WO!!

And its Wostruation not MENstruation
and MENopause ... is plain gone!!!
I’ve been hot flashing since I was born been speaking my mind and bitching since I could hear sound...
Been horny since my tits could dance...
I won’t pause for men... to label my changes... when I change like sails loyal to wind !
When I am happy its MANia when I take charge its MANagement !, when the clarion call is loud and clear it’s a MANdate!!

It is MANpower called when the needs arises and I am invisible as a WO!! and when I make wishes come true
I MANifest!!.
Its not I as a WO that conjures your dreams...

Oh see me born as a WO, a cheer of change!!
I release man to be on his own and the world of WOs ..to come out in droves. !!

I am not a man-eating WO just a WO needing equal time I am invincible !! indivisible by 0 undivided in time
I will join you as WO to MAN be your partner your joy your sexy vixen to the core but take the MAN from WO I want a word of my own-WO stands alone without the man we are whole!!
Towers Gone

They burn scorching in white smoke, and burgundy fire my towers torched in orange flames, my eyes glow with ire... the plane slices through the Towers, secretaries’ fingers blasted from the keyboard into Al Queda’s inferno.
Man in wheelchair becomes ashes with his friend kneeling beside him, I sit and watch my head turns left from my computer to the television screen his eyes say, should I jump or burn?
will I die before I land?
Will I faint before I turn into dust?
I sit staring at the television screen... their screams pierce my flesh their souls impale my heart, they run from smoke the living,
they breathe the smoke,
the dying,
I ride over the Queensborough Bridge Empire State Building’s blue light shines alone...
NYC has lost its two front teeth.
When I ride the bus over the bridge
I burn with them
I jump with them
A little bit of me is gone like them...
My towers are globs of steel laced with torn fingers, detached arms.
One lonely shoe belongs to a lady that lives....
She sees the picture of her shoe in The Daily News.. looks in the mirror and lights a candle to honor her next breath.
Our Father

Our father who art in heaven hallowed be thy name?
And what about Mother?
Why wasn’t her name hallowed in heaven as well???
WHO WAS MADE IN MY IMAGE??
When I hold my hands in prayer where is the Lady of the Lord??
How immaculate can your conception be when I am invisible???
Didn’t she give birth to you oh “holy father”!!!??
Wasn’t she the reason you breathe??
You could have been a formidable pair!!!
Father AND Mother!!!
You could have given me a mirror to see myself in a glow of majesty!!!
Could have given my father a reason to honor me and not beat and abuse my body to the point where I wanted to poison him!!
If the holy goddess sat beside you, I could have chosen my Mother’s name, or perhaps invent my own!!
I could have been president, prime minister, maybe a pope!!!
I could have waged war and fought Hitler instead of being one of the girls bowing to hero soldiers at the end of the war.
I could have been a heroine and been in the parade waving my arms proud of helping free the Jews of Nazi persecution,
I could have managed the Yankees or Dodgers,
I could have been a Black woman and held the reigns of this country or any other!!!
I could have voted since the beginning of time instead of 1920!!!
I could have spoken proudly of my horny nature and made love to men without worrying if I was in love!!
Enjoyed the nature of my dynamic voice instead of being called a bitch...
If you dear “father” “lord” “god” of singular power, “white knight with blue eyes” had the vision of true spirit and had a womyn on a throne next to yours, my daughter would dream of being a doctor or lawyer in stead of a secretary fetching coffee,

My parents never celebrated my Bat Mitzvah, never thought at 13 I was a poet, singer and dancer with an eagle’s grace, both my brothers were divined as men and taught they were the providers of sons and daughters.

The times are being born when the silent will dance!!!
The mighty will wake apologizing.
I shall not take a back seat to bible, torah and koran litany demeaning my power!!!
I shall pray to the Universe and the Forces which led the way in helping me find my soul, surviving beatings and mental torture......
The dream continues,
I sleep wrapped in my own arms-I keep dancing, facing the mirror, the one the “holy father” never showed me!!
Eman

She’s strong and bold the angel bearing secrets not yet told...
The child is wild spits in your eyes, rises from birth, crying and wise.
You can slap her, scold her, burn her flesh fuck her nascent lips, scare her smack her spank her but nothing can kill her words.
Can’t be silenced, or stopped,
can’t be shut down or out, can’t be spoken to from below, only reached from the top, Can’t be insulted, intimidated, you are helpless before her majesty, the baby born with blades.

You can’t be older, or braver, you can’t be quieter or louder...
She will see you, read you, know you,
before you speak.
She will teach you, love you, kiss you before you have a chance to control her.
She will run fly cry with abandon,
You can’t stop the wild for they will crash through you, race you and win you you will only see a cloud of pink dust...
You can’t kill her.. with bullets or bombs, you can’t stab her she’ll break the knife.
Her spirit does not know from religions or rules, her flight has no limits no gimmicks no games.
She was born a child a woman a sage.
She will smile softly stare you powerless with love and rage.

You are not her parent, she is yours, don’t give he a color a birthday or a flag, don’t tell her she is this and that...
For she knows her nature like noone else.

She dresses with wings and shiny things, one day a buttefly one day a killer.
Oh fill her with love that she will understand, don’t stop her from her path, she will never land.

Give her a sword a poem a song and a guitar, she’s the girl called Eman
The Avatar.
Dear Starbucks
the line in my poem
"Trynta pay off student loans w/salaries from Starbucks" was in no way intended to offend you The real question we ask is why the U.S. economy can't provide adequate employment for me to be able to repay the loans on my three degrees with minimum wage and in this so-called land of plenty home of the american dream where nothing is at it seems why can't education be free Actually Starbucks
we thank you for giving us the opportunity to be employed in this land of the free where so many have lost their jobs so we work for you unorganized and non-union it's the american dream turned nightmare homogenized and deculturalized ignoring the pleas of our 3rd world kin as child labor picks your beans while half the world is strung out on sugar and caffein lined up to get your overpriced fix to start the day like crack fiends
I must admit your product is supreme got folks dreaming the american dream Lady Liberty

Lady Liberty
stands in the harbor dazed and confused about what she is seeing pondering how the asylum is being run by the inmates or if someone slipped hallucinogens into her tea maybe the water is tainted as Flint Michigan wondering why the filters are clogged to the brim so things seem distorted and oceans are muddy from sea to shining sea seems like she may need medical assistance without Obamacare since social security has been kidnapped and freedom is no longer free Lady liberty stands in the harbor hiding her eyes from all the corruption she sees in total dismay.of the disarray that all of the rigged elections bring wondering if there is a fortune teller who can let her know what the future will be and if Orwell's Animal Farm and 1984 were just rehearsals is this democracy only an illusion or will she be deported by Homeland Security the scribblings on the wall read be careful do not leave the arena to the fools but the inmates are already in charge of the asylum sanity is highly overrated There's a prostitute in the vestibule turning tricks for tickets to the show the one armed bandit is in the corner bets are placed all the decks are stacked there's a neon sign over the door flashing "No Exit" abandon hope all who enter here no one's paying attention dumbed down by weapons of mass distraction hypnotized by social media sending text messages to Esu begging not to be bamboozled anymore but he laughs at them all mumbling that the mind is the last frontier death is a way of life nobody comes out alive so we search for a new chapter looking for a do over but the pencil has no eraser there is only white out and the paper stock is blue the delete key is broken then i awaken from this nightmare to learn time is never ending the body is only a container for the soul My Pens Got A Point

it's a gloomy day in gotham even the sky weeps two trips around the sun short of half a century since the king of love was killed malcolm's cry for self determination short circuited by civil rights still absent the debt of reparations still not paid peckerwoods disillusioned confederate battle rags taped to their consciousness brains on lockdown illiterate believers in the holy babble wishing for the good ole days when strange fruit hung from poplar trees ghost of hitler reincarnate klansmen dressed in suits of blue water hoses replaced by teargas tanks and FEMA camps on standby for the coming armageddon gentrification is ethnic cleansing land of the free home of the brave doomsday looms on the horizon as we pray this is a nightmare i'm afraid my tongue was handcuffed struggling to sound the alarm hoping you read this poem of liberation before the fifth amendment is taken hostage and thinking is outlawed i'm just glad my pen's got a point Things You Wanted to know about the Bronx, but were afraid to ask

i first came to meet the Bronx while she was pregnant with hip hop a bastard child she didn't know who the father was i lived on the top floor of a six story walk up down the street from loose joints nickel sacks of sess and dimes of thai stick searching for something good to say about it I could only say the rent was cheap and the building kept together by the roaches holding hands late nights i found myself watching the mice dancing across the floor doing the boogie to the richochette of gunplay I was beginning to think that's why it was called the boogie down the hot commodity was heroin crack hadn't made the scene the year 1978 and the threat of gentrification was stewing in a pot of destruction music programs were eliminated from education so the school of hard knocks appropriated electricity from street lights to power speakers and turn tables the US War machine slowed down a bit the economy dragged and Ronnie-the-Raygun looted the poverty programs so community centers locked their doors DJ Kool Herc threw block parties in the projects so rappin and dancing became the new battleground the drug war hadn't started so there was temporarily no turf to fight over there was a brief quiet before the storm of heroin replaced by crack cocaine supplied by the C.I.A aiding the Rockefeller Plan to make the hood unlivable building condos pushing out poor folk and Mom & Pop stores meanwhile MC's had bragging rights to talk trash about the birth of Hip Hop in the Boogie Down corporations raised the rent too high for bodegas and corner stores struggle not to be replaced by Starbucks It's the last hold out for affordable housing the news media called it Urban Blight treating it like an extension of the Bronx Zoo but the inhabitants called it Fort Apache Street Gangs ruled the block and Hunts Point Titty Bars like the Wedge and The Golden Lady were where the hustlers and ladies of the night came to play Fat Joe, T La Rock, C Ray Waltz, Smooth B Kool Keith, Sadat X, Big Pun ruled
When Run DMC from Queens came on the scene KRS One let everyone know who came first singing-The Bridge is Over-The Bridge is over but now there's gentrification I call it appropriation as the new urban hipster's call it SOBRO so as things change and may never be the same just remember
I'm talkin- South Bronx-South South Bronx
Call Me Momma for Just One Night

The saxophone moans around a dark avenue like a two dollar prostitute, telling her trick “Call me momma for just one night.”
He can only pay her in rolls of pennies, but she'll take anything for the privilege of being anything she ain't.
Her curves are lit by the low aura from the newsstand just outside the alley, but no one notices out of courtesy.
She could be hollering “EXTRA! EXTRA!” while moonlight's soldering clouds together.
Anything can happen when you're rucking in this kind of weather.
Across the way, Sally's getting chilly like a dilly-dally filly getting lost on her own street corner.
Wandering with head down between her legs, thinking “Christ! When's the last time I had a plate of ham and eggs?”
That saxophone screams with desire for something you just can't have no matter how pretty it is.
Notes reflected in a pool of late night rain, or wino drool from Mr. Penny Roll.
What happens in an alley takes a heavy toll.
Sleeping in scraps of yesterday's news.
Rolling in scabs of the last three screws.
Looking up at some strange smirking lady asking you to call her momma for just one night.
“I only have a few rolls of pennies,” you say.
That's fine with her because the saxophone is not nearly done with the air.
Parking Meters Like Walking Sticks

Just a nickel past 2 on a Saturday night, a local drunk ambles through the parking lot.
He leans on every meter, looking at the needle on each one and saying, “I guess it's time for change.” Chuckling every time, because he's the only one who ever laughs with himself, not at himself.
He crosses the road to where Madge the street maven is begging for change outside the Midnight Penny.
The smell of coffee floating out those doors is almost better than going to sleep.
The drunk puts a hand on Madge's head and says, “If I gave you a quarter, how much time would you have left?”
He lopes down the alley laughing (with, not at) and wondering what the hell happened to all the parking meters around here.
Right Cross in a Juke Joint

The story goes that I hit Jimmy Phelps for looking down my girlfriend's shirt

That the force of my blow spun him round and that's why his face hit the counter and landed on the floor in a shower of blood and teeth

Well, he sure did lie in a pool of his own making

And his bacon-slaw-bbq-burger laid eviscerated on checkerboard tile next to his paunchy gut

But the truth is the truth went down with Jimmy Phelps

And I sat down to a meal with a beautiful girl I'd just met Closing Time Coffee

It's only as burnt as you feel When the last car leaves the parking lot,
When the last echoes shrink

Down toward the interstate.
Some say the bottom of the pot
Has the best flavor,

And that ring around the middle Is just a bookmark for The last person to drink of it.

The sun is not quite finished Casting strange alphabet on walls,
So you pour a cup,

Still hot and dark, Hunching over the counter, Deciphering a little with every sip.
Midnight Coffee, Eggs, & Hot Sauce

I drink coffee at a counter Littered with ash and small change
The platter streaked in spirals
The color of rust

Heat near the back of my throat Where useless flavor goes to die
And until the corners of my eyes dry Feathers on edges of everything

Country music playing in a corner Excavated from a beer-soaked tomb Unseen by sun since 1973 I pay no attention to trucks going by My shadow is cast in window cut-outs Sliding across tonight's specials

NBPF Staff
Colin Haskins

Founder & Co-Owner NBPF

Colin Haskins is a writer, poet, published author, & event promoter. For 30+ years has been creating venues locally, nationally, and worldwide.

Bringing poets, authors, artists, and musicians together to bring poetry, music, art and culture to many different national landmarks, museums and historical locations. Colin is Co-Owner, Co-CEO, and Executive Director of the National Beat Poetry Foundation, Inc. which includes the National Beat Poetry Festival and International Beat Poetry Festival with Debbie Tosun Kilday (2016-present). He is Poetry Director at The Licia & Mason Beekley Community Library, New Hartford, CT where he manages a monthly “Kerouac Café” for the National Beat Poetry Festival. He co-founded the Connecticut Beat Poetry Festival (2008), National Beat Poetry Festival and International Beat Poetry Festival with Yvon J. Cormier (2015-present). He is Founder of Free Poets Collective(2011-present), which is the first group certified to host the yearly “Woman Scream” event in the USA held yearly in Connecticut in the month of March. He acts as Ekphrastic Poetry Director for The Community Renewal Team National Arts Program in Hartford, CT (2012-present). He is also Poetry Director for The Buttonwood Tree Performing Arts & Cultural Center in Middletown, CT (1995-present).

His poetry has been published in several different publications. He is the published author of 6 poetry books, currently working on two new poetry books soon to be published.
Debbie Tosun Kilday

Co-Owner NBPF

Debbie Tosun Kilday is a writer, award winning published author, poet, nature photographer, artist, illustrator, graphic artist, and an expert high-roller slot player.

She is Co-Owner, Co-CEO, and Executive Director of the National Beat Poetry Foundation, Inc. which includes the National Beat Poetry Festival and International Beat Poetry Festival. (3-2016-Present)

Debbie is Special Events Director, and Past President of Connecticut Authors and Publishers Association, (CAPA)(2005-present). Debbie is owner of Kilday Krafts, (1981-present). She is also a member of Free Poets Collective, and the now defunct, University of Connecticut’s (OLLI) Osher Lifelong Learning Institute’s Hydropolis Poetry Group. Her poetry has been published in several different publications. She has appeared on television and radio as a how-to expert on winning millions playing slot machines and is known as the Slot Queen of the Northeast.
Yvon J. Cormier

Executive Director NBPF

Yvon is a writer, author, poet, and poetry event promoter who is dedicated to creating new venues locally and throughout the world to bring poets, authors, artists, and musicians together.

He is Executive Director of the National Beat Poetry Foundation, Inc. which includes the National Beat Poetry Festival and International Beat Poetry Festival with Colin Haskins and Debbie Tosun Kilday (2016-present), Co-Founder with Colin Haskins of the National Beat Poetry Festival & International Beat Poetry Festival (2015-present). Co-Founder with Colin Haskins of the Connecticut Beat Poetry Festival-(2008).

Cormier has been writing poetry for 20+ years. His work is characterized by an influence of Jazz & Blues. He writes from an insatiable nomadic intelligence which obsesses over what is unsaid and the seemingly invisible aspects of daily life. His work is rooted in drawing life pictures where words owe a greater debt to what they represent rather than the reverse.

Cormier is a Self-Employed Author, Writer, Poet and Editorial Consultant – YJC Copy. He also makes handcrafted wirework & beaded jewelry –Djuna Star, and teaches writing and jewelry making workshops.
About the Authors

Lori Desrosiers’ poetry books are The Philosopher’s Daughter (Salmon Poetry, 2013), a chapbook, Inner Sky (Glass Lyre Press 2015) and Sometimes I Hear the Clock Speak (Salmon Poetry, 2016). Her work has been nominated for a Pushcart Prize. She edits Naugatuck River Review, a journal of narrative poetry, and WORDPEACE, an online journal dedicated to social justice. She teaches Literature and Composition at Westfield State University and Holyoke Community College, and Poetry in the Interdisciplinary Studies program for the Lesley University M.F.A. graduate program.

William F. DeVault is the U.S. Poet Laureate for the National Beat Poetry Festival for 2017-2018. The author of over twenty books, with half a dozen CDs of spoken word recordings to his credit, this poet was christened "The Romantic Poet of the Internet" in 1996 by Yahoo. He vibrates in the strange ether between the academic poets and the street poets, aggressively avoiding labels while he churns out memorable works in his Bohemian existence. His works have appeared in multiple anthologies and he has stalked venues from New York to Los Angeles, from New Orleans to Boston. He formerly was the founder and host of "The Romantic and Erotic Poetry Group" for AOL and is the creator and publisher of the fusion literary/photography journal amomancies.

Ernel O. Grant Poetz Realm Owner/Founder September 2006- Present. Poetz Realm, a family owned business, was founded in 2006 by Ernel Grant. Poetz Realm is a place where artists get together and share in their artistry (i.e. spoken word, poetry, and emceeing, singing, verbal expression). Ernel established Poetz Realm in an effort to continue providing the Bridgeport community with a positive and uplifting venue. The 2011 Connecticut Poetry Team was put together by Poetz Realm and Verbal Slap Productions in an effort to have a well represented team from the state. Efforts to put another team together for the National Slam this year are already underway. Various clothes drives were conducted by Poetz Realm to assist less fortunate members of the community. Along with the clothes drives attempts to collect school supplies, back packs and art supplies were also done throughout the years. Ernel was introduced to spoken word in 2000 due to needing an outlet for expression. He has been wrapped up in poetry and the performing arts since then. He is also a founding member of "The Bulanians", a spoken word group who revitalized the art form in the Hartford area. Young artists can perform poems, music and dance in an attempt to share their talents. This is open to all ages and takes place every 2nd and 4th Saturdays of the month. This workshop allows generations to have fun and learn together.
Viviana Grell was shot out of her mother's uterus landing in Argentina. At age 10 landed in New York City, learned English with words becoming a weapon of expression. At age 17 thanked her parents for being transportation to get to this planet and left. Her mission as a writer is pushing boundariers of sex, religion and politics. She has a law career, hosts the Spanish radio show "Accidents Your Power and Justice" on WPAT AM, hosts her uncensored open mic "Stark Reality Open Mic" in NYC, organizes Singles over 40 events in NYC.

Ngoma Hill is a performance poet, multi-instrumentalist, singer/songwriter, Artivist and paradigm shifter, who for over 40 years has used culture as a tool to raise socio-political and spiritual consciousness through work that encourages critical thought. A former member of Amiri Baraka's "The Spirit House Movers and Players" and the contemporary freedom song duo"Serious Bizness", Ngoma weaves poetry and song that raises contradictions and searches for a solution to a just and peaceful world. Ngoma was the Prop Slam Winner of the 1997 National Poetry Slam Competition in Middletown, CT and his been published widely. He was featured in the P.B.S spoken word documentary The Apropoets with Allen Ginsburg. Ngoma has curated and hosted the poetry slam at the Martin Luther King Family Festival of Social and Environmental Justice at the Yale/Peabody Museum since 1995. He was also selected to participate in the 2009 Badilisha Poetry Xchange in Capetown, South Africa. In December of 2011 He was initiated as a Priest of Obatala in Ibadan, Nigeria. In June of 2013 he was initiated as a Priest of Ifa.

Daniel McTaggart's poetry has been published in Kestrel, Backbone Mountain Review, and Amomancies. Most of it has been written in several local diners near Morgantown, WV. He is the editor of "Diner Stories: Off the Menu" from Mountain State Press.

Carlo Parcelli studied and worked for many years with the Joyce/Wake scholar, Dr. Rudd Fleming, who translated Greek drama with Ezra Pound while Pound was incarcerated at St. Elizabeth’s Hospital in Washington, DC. He has published two books in the style of Pound’s Cantos, ‘Three Antiphonies’ and ‘Fernparallelismus’. He has also published a series of 88 monoloues, ‘The Gospel According to Simon Kananaios: A Meditation on Empire’ based on David Jones’ monologues of a Roman principalis in his volume ‘The Sleeping Lord’. Carlos has a forthcoming epic poem about a fictitious First Century Roman cynic philosopher called ‘Canus Ictus in Exilium’ (Dog Bite in Exile). His work, generally excerpted, has appeared in a number of journals including Exquisite Corpse, Make It New, Brave New World and Science as Culture. He has performed his work, especially ‘The Gospel’ at dozens of venues including the Boog Poetry Festival, The National Beat Poetry Festival, The Bowery Poetry Club and Busboys and Poets in Washington, DC. He is currently an editor at Flashpoint magazine.
<http://www.flashpointmag.com/>, an online journal largely devoted to high-Modernist poetics.

Marci Payne is an American author, photographer, and musician living in Northern New Jersey. Her main influences are American Roots music, Russian Authors, and Italian food. She lives alone with her memories and an imaginary cat.

Paul Richmond artist and performer for 45 years. Created Human Error Publishing, organizes monthly readings and annual Word events / festivals, publishes independent writers. Four books; “No Guarantees – Adjust and Continue.”, "Ready or Not - Living in the Break Down Lane" and "Too Much of a Good Thing - In the land of Scarcity - Breeds Contempt" "You Might Need A Bigger Hammer". Fifth book due out 2017. Published in numerous journals, anthologies, a featured poet here and abroad. www.humanerrorpublishing.com

Annie Sauter is a poet of the loud and rowdy variety. She has been published in multiple journals, collections, magazines and underground press publications over the years. She has also had her work published by Berkeley Women’s Collective, Bright Hill Press, Great Weather for Media Press, Maverick Press, and the Alternative New Years Day Collection, Poetrybay, and in Reality Beach. Her Book A Plastic Bag of Red Cells was published by Bright Hill Press. In Colorado she was just featured at the Millardi Theatre, in The In The Moment: Life Art Performance event. She frequently writes about the political and street scenes of the 1960s and 1970s, and later of children and rural life. Lately trailer park living has occupied the pages. In the 60s and 70s she was published by The Rat, The Berkeley Tribe and the Berkeley Women’s Collective press. She is a watercolor and acrylic painter. She lives in a trailer in Almont, Colorado. She has two grown daughters.

Chris Vannoy from San Diego, has been writing for most of his life. Promoter, editor, teacher, and tireless advocate of words both heard and spoken; he works endlessly to raise up words from page to ear and from mouth to the air. He is the originator of the Poet’s Tree featured and open reading series, as well as editor of the Poet’s Tree Press. Chris has been published in Ghosts of the Beatnik Poets, City Works, The Writing Center, Tokes anthologies, Visions, and Step Jazz magazines. He has participated in San Diego’s Quincy Troupe’s “Artist’s on the Cutting Edge” series, Lollapalooza Spoken Word Tent, Border Voices Poetry in the Park, Tearing the Curtain 3, and a poetry exchange between San Diego and Orange County. He was one of twenty-five San Diego Poets featured in the Exploded Views CD and two CDs from San Diego based group Wormhole. In 1998 Mr. Vannoy was published in the Poetry Calendar and JOE’S JOURNAL Best of the Beach. In 2000, he read at Mills College in Oakland, and at The West Coast Regional slam at Henry Miller Library in Big Sur, California. Latest books published by Baxter Daniels Ink Press are: “A Strange Summer” (2014) where much of his performance poetry is compiled and “The Rest of It” recently released this year.

Chryssa Velissariou a published poet in Greek and English, has been nominated as the 1st International Beat Poet Laureate of the National Beat Poetry Festival 2017-2018 in the USA. She has more than 3000 poems in her blogs. She also writes poetry in French and in German. She was a host at the International Beat Poetry Festival 2015, the WP Poetathon in 2013 and the WP Peaceathon in 2015 in Greece. She is a Peace Activist, WP Canada and International Peace Ambassador, and 100 TPC events’ organizer. A Professor of Physics (Space Physics), candidate Doctor in NT Education, honoured and awarded since 2011 for Excellence and Innovation in Education by the Ministry of Education, Greece. She is also an elected Member of her hometown Municipality.

James P. Wagner (Ishwa) is an editor, publisher, award-winning fiction writer, essayist, performance poet, and alum twice over (BA & MALS) of Dowling College. He is the publisher for Local Gems Poetry Press and the Senior Founder and President of the Bards Initiative, a Long Island based non-profit dedicated to using poetry for social improvement. He has been on the advisory boards for the Nassau County Poet Laureate Society and the Walt Whitman Birthplace Association. James also helped with the Dowling College Writing Conference. His poetry is also used to autism advocacy, having appeared at the Naturally Autistic Conference in Vancouver and in Naturally Autistic Magazine, as well as his essays. James believes poetry is alive and well and thoroughly enjoys being a part of poetic culture. His most recent collection of poetry is Ten Year Reunion.

George Wallace is a professional writer and educator with 25 years in journalism, public relations and education. He is additionally a poet and performer, writer in residence at the Walt Whitman Birthplace and first poet laureate of Suffolk County, with 29 chapbooks published, and is an adjunct professor of English at Pace University. He has conducted literary readings and discussions at such US locations as the John Steinbeck Center, William Carlos Williams Center, Pollock-Krasner House, Gordon Parks Museum, Woody Guthrie Festival, Lowell Celebrates Kerouac and the Center for Hellenic Studies in Washington DC. As well, he has a worldwide profile of performances, lectures, workshops and appearances, and a quarter century as organizer of poetry communities.
Local Gems Poetry Press is a small Long Island based poetry press dedicated to spreading poetry through performance and the written word. Local Gems believes that poetry is the voice of the people, and as the sister organization of the Bards Initiative, believes that poetry can be used to make a difference.

www.localgemspoetrypress.com